Luxury Comes Closer With Four New Stops...

WESTHAMPTON – At Westhampton Coachworks, 114 County Road 31 in Westhampton Beach. Offering special amenities like unlimited daily parking, unlimited overnight parking (fees apply), plus a state of the art repair, body shop and best car wash service on Long Island. Not to mention, it is next door to the beautiful Annona restaurant where you can call ahead for reservations, or even take out...need we say more?

RIVERHEAD – At the new Hotel Indigo, sure to become the true gateway to North Fork Wine Country, Hampton Luxury Liner will be offering daily service between NYC and this location. Unlimited parking is available.

SAG HARBOR – You have been asking, and we are delivering. We are happy to announce weekend service between Sag Harbor and NYC. Departing in front of the Sag Harbor Movie Theater.

MONTAUK – Due to popular demand, weekend service to Montauk too! So for those of you that want luxury to "the End" – now you have it. Departing from South Euclid Avenue near the Police Station.

HONORING THE ARTIST: DOUG REINA

Take a look at the website of this week's cover artist, Doug Reina, and you'll discover something interesting: a mixture of sizes, styles and subjects evoking diverse local color found on the East End. But these images aren't the usual kind. There are no typical luscious landscapes, tall windmills or chic shops, only farm trucks, real people and a lion.

A lion? Yes, that's right—a statue of a lion that sits outside an antique store on the side of the road. It's the same site where Reina found the artificial dinosaur gracing this week's cover. It's a bit startling, of course, but Reina is not a complacent artist; he's on the lookout for the unusual. As he's fond of saying, "If you're open to the world, the world will open up to you."

Q: What is it that attracted you to the cover image? After all, this isn't something you made up. You actually saw the dinosaur.

A: Yes, it's real. My family has been going out to Montauk since the 1970s, and we always pass that statuary place on Route 27 in Southampton. I saw the dinosaur outside looming over the passing cars on the highway; I stopped, set up my easel and painted it, plein air style.

Q: So what does this say about how you create art?

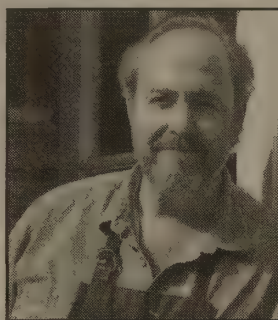

A: There's always a creative narrative in my head. I just take my paints and go out into the world. I go off the beaten path.

Q: You were a TV news reporter for years, for Channel 55 and Viacom. How does that relate to "going off the beaten path?"

A: You have to go out and look for news. You can't wait for news to come to you. It's the quest that counts.

Q: Like what you do now as an artist. In your various quests, you have discovered some interesting scenes and subjects like one on your web with this man sitting among some cars.

A: That's Marty sitting with his cars. The image was just poetry. Someone said the painting turned the place into a car museum.

Q: Another connection between your news experience and your art is a TV project you're working on now.

A: I'm working on a pilot show (actually I'm editing four shows) called "This Thing Called Art." It's shot in high definition; we went to a company in Brooklyn that makes canvases.

Q: What other TV shows would you like to do?

A: Perhaps visiting the studios of artists like April Gornik and Eric Fischl.

Q: When it comes to art, what else motivates you to paint what you paint?

A: There's a lot of competition out there when it comes to painters. There are a lot of good artists who paint the heck out of landscape. But there's only one Jasper Johns or Willem deKooning. I want to paint like no one else.

Q: How important is that to you connect with other artists?

A: I'm on a path to meet other artists. I'd like to do a monthly get-together where we could share ideas and support one another.

Q: Your experience with The New York Foundation for the Arts was encouraging in this regard.

A: Yes. I was selected to participate in the statewide Mark Program. A group of artists met at the East End Arts Council in Riverhead; we learned how to promote ourselves. We had to give a talk and a power point presentation. The group has decided to do an exhibit at the Suffolk County Community College Museum.

Q: You also have a philosophy concerning other ways to develop as an artist.

A: I want to continue growing. I love to do painting, but research and development is important to me. I like to try something new—to blow out the pipes.

Want a Gambling Casino at Your House? Now's the Time to Decide

By Dan Rattiner

During the last six months, as it becomes increasingly apparent that the Shinnecock Indian Reservation is going to be declared a Federally recognized Native American tribe, everybody is climbing on the bandwagon to recommend that they help the tribe get one of those new fangled gambling casinos.

The City of New York is working on linking up the Shinnecocks with the Javitts Center. Belmont Raceway has met with them about having the casino. Riverhead says it would be okay to have a gambling casino in Calverton. A developer in Chicago took tribal members up to the Catskills to look into the idea of a casino there. And just a week ago, Nassau County says it's in talks with the Shinnecocks about having them put their casino next to the Nassau Coliseum.

Everybody, it seems, wants a casino. Or at least wants to be on record about whether they are for or against a casino on their land. Just a few days ago, legislation was proposed in Southampton that if passed would PREVENT the Shinnecocks from having a casino adjacent to the Gabreski Airport in Westhampton. All these places were in the works. What if they decided on HERE? The thing is, you just never know where a Shinnecock casino could pop up. There are billions of dollars at stake. The Shinnecocks say that they'd consider having several casinos.

This behavior contrasts sharply with the behavior of practically all public officials for 20 years prior to today. Back then, NOBODY wanted a casino. Now, with federal recognition around the corner, the Shinnecocks can have one. So everybody is lining up to have one. After all, though, the casino may be five years or more down the road, but it's important to get on the list now. They're going to have to start planning soon.

The thing is, you just never know where a Shinnecock casino could pop up.

Under the circumstances, I thought to talk to my wife.

"What do you think?" I asked her. "Are we for it or against it."

"What?"

"Having the casino at our house? Do we want to get on the list?"

"Is this something we have to decide today?"

"If we want to be seriously considered. They're going to look at the possibilities. Belmont. The Catskills. Riverhead. The Nassau Coliseum. Three Mile Harbor Road. They're all offering up their places."

We took a vote. It was two against, and none in favor. The dog abstained. So no we won't be on the list.

Next I thought about the Dan's Papers office. I went over there and got the staff together.

"The upside is that it could mean billions of dollars. The downside is we only have 16 parking spaces."

"What about playing cards? Could we just allow card playing?" one of them asked.

I told them no.

"What if we have the casino just Thursday to Sunday. We need the place to do the newspaper from Monday to Wednesday."

Another no.

The idea was floated that we use the office for the paper in the daytime, then turn the place over to the casino people from sunset to sunrise. But somebody wondered about our finding people drunk and asleep in the morning on the layout tables. So that didn't fly either.

Eventually, a vote was called. It was 34 against having the casino at Dan's Papers and one person in favor. He said that a billion dollars was a lot of money and this was just too compelling for him. So Dan's Papers, by majority vote, is on record as not wanting a gambling casino at our office. So whoever you are out there, write that down.

As for you, you really owe it to yourself to consider how you stand regarding whatever property you are involved with.

The Ross School people ought to decide. Certainly SUNY Southampton should be on one list or the other. And what about the horse show grounds in Bridgehampton? That place is only in use for about one week a year. That's another possibility.

Otherwise, three years from now, a big press conference will be held where the Shinnecocks and developers get up in front of a microphone, roll out a long list and say, "We have decided upon the location of the new Shinnecock Indian Casino—and it will be at the home of Ralph Atkinson at 4236 East Quogue-Riverhead Road. Congratulations!!"

And everybody cheers.

Madonna has been busy securing her Bridgehampton property. According to neighbors, she's put up "a couple of thousand" hedges and installed a new electric gate.

Tony Award winner Marcia Gay Harden will appear on USA's "Royal Pains" as Dr. Elizabeth Blair, a surgeon and Hamptons Heritage Hospital board member. The Hamptons-based hit returns June 3.

Rumor has it that Amagansett's Sarah Jessica Parker is so worried about Sex and the City 2 spoilers hitting the Internet, she's fining any cast and crewmember who talks about the plot. Movie execs also filmed fake scenes with Kim Cattrall to throw off gossipers. The movie opens May 27.

Iron Man 2, starring Robert Downey Jr. and Amagansett's Gwyneth Paltrow, took the box office top spot last weekend with an estimated $133 million.

Joy Behar showed up at Blue Sky restaurant at 10:30 a.m. one morning. There was no staff on duty, but the new 5-star chef, Marco Barilla, made and extravagant breakfast for Behar and her friends, and served it himself—without knowing of her celebrity. The two discussed Behar's roots: Calabria.

Appearing for a record-breaking 15th time, East Ender Alec Baldwin will host the "Saturday Night Live" finale this weekend.

A teaser trailer for Super 8, the top-secret project produced by East Hampton's Steven Spielberg, leaked on the Internet last week. The plot remains a mystery, but sources say it's influenced by Spielberg's love of '70s sci-fi.

Sag Harbor's Christie Brinkley is denying reports that she had a facelift when Alexa Ray Joel had a nose job several weeks ago. According to Brinkley, she was at the hospital to support her daughter.

Amagansett resident Paul McCartney shared with BBC radio what it's like to be one of the most famous people in the world. Said McCartney, "The weight of fame can get pretty annoying...but I finally realized I've got rights." Among those is refusing to sign autographs while dining at restaurants.

Critics Scoff at Britt Sullivan's Latest Proposal

First published in Dan's Papers Montauk Pioneer, Late-July 1965

By Dan Rattiner

The project was preposterous. One could read the article in the New York World Telegram on June 30 and wonder if it were serious.

Miss Britt Sullivan began her proposed 3,178-mile swim to Europe when she entered the Atlantic off Coney Island last Wednesday.

The article was serious. On the 1st of July, 1964, the second anniversary of her Montauk swim, Sullivan was splashing away somewhere south of Far Rockaway.

Everything happened very fast on the night of the 1st of July. Sullivan swam along in the black darkness of the ocean, going up one side of a wave and down the other. Her escort boat, the large Marine Center 65, had to stay a good distance away from the swimmer for fear of hitting her in the rough water.

There were searchlights on the ship, but they weren't very effective. Then, about midnight, Sullivan simply disappeared. She swam up the side of a wave out of view of the escort boat, and that was the last anyone ever saw of her. She never came back down the near side.

The escort boat waited awhile expecting her to appear, their concern turned to worry, then to fear. Twenty minutes of searching didn't turn her up. They radioed the Coast Guard.

At first the Coast Guard thought the message was from the Marine Circus. Everything connected with the fantastic swim seemed to be a circus. They were quite skeptical that Sullivan had been lost at sea. It seemed more likely that she had crawled back on board the escort boat, or had been picked up in some elaborately worked-out hoax. Still a life might actually be at stake, Sullivan could well be lost at sea where the Coast Guard might find her and save her life.

Coast Guard search planes left airports for the area near the Marine Center. Helicopters went aloft. Several Cutters moved into the ocean. And as the radio and television stations began to report the bulletin over the air, telephone call upon telephone call began coming into the Coast Guard headquarters, each one telling the Coast Guard to call off its search—that the whole thing was a hoax and a publicity stunt.

Was it indeed a hoax? Or was Sullivan really lost at sea? No one knows the true facts to this day. The Coast Guard boarded the Marine Center while it was still at sea yet couldn't find Sullivan. They interrogated all the crew members without positive result. And in spite of an extensive Coast Guard search, crisscrossing the ocean acre by acre, no trace of the swimmer was ever found. The Coast Guard returned to harbor without results.

"Coast Guardsmen risked their lives looking for Sullivan," a Coast Guard official said.

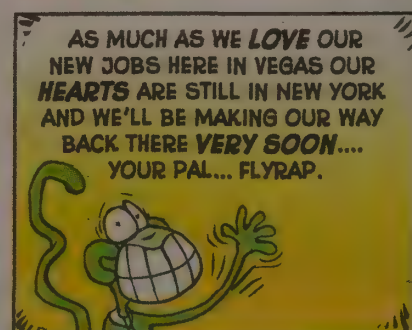

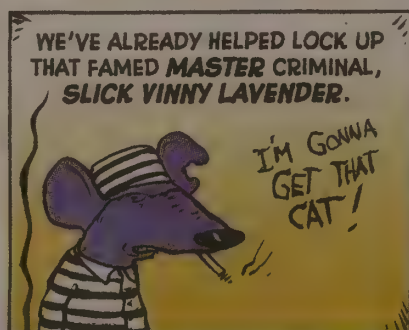

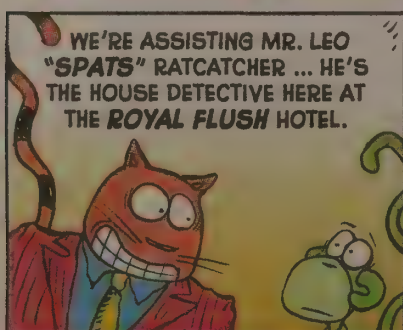

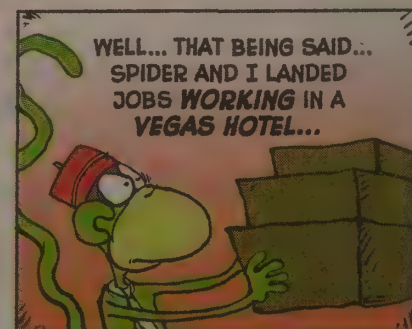

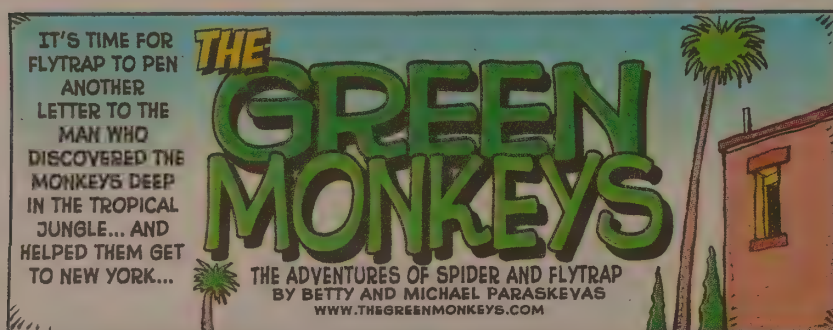

On July second, after the search was completed, the Coast Guard teletyped the following report back to their headquarters in Manhattan.

Eavesdropping

It Was Like I Died & Got to Hear All the Comments at My Funeral

By Dan Rattiner

Last Monday at four in the afternoon, The Southampton Press posted a story on its web site that led a lot of its readers to believe that Dan's Papers was going out of business.

Why they did this I don't know. Dan's Papers is 50 years old, continues on and is profitable. What's really happening is that the parent company of Dan's Papers, a nationwide outfit in Cincinnati that owns nearly 100 newspapers, is going through a financial restructuring. It's like the bankruptcy that General Motors or Chrysler or Newsday went through. It doesn't affect Buzz Chew Chevrolet or Storms Motors in Southampton.

Other media wrote stories about this and got a few details wrong. Nobody got it so wrong as did The Southampton Press. (Note: We publish The Southampton Press website item in its entirety at the end of this article. See for yourself.)

Interestingly, The Southampton Press story did result in a lot of their bloggers expressing their feelings about Dan's Papers and either lamenting its passing or saying, good riddance, it is gone.

I was really, really interested in this. Since I have spent 50 years of my life at this, it was like I'd died and gone to my own funeral. I could eavesdrop on what people were saying about me.

"What goes up must come down," was the first sentence of the first post, put there by PBR, of Southampton.

"Good riddance to that rag of a paper," wrote BIGJimbo12 of East Quogue. "It was never a newsworthy thing to be called a newspaper. Catered to 'east of the canal' snots."

"Amazing how someone with so little writing ability and ridiculously high advertising rates could last as long as he did. Why those idiots in Cincinnati would waste their money on such an inferior product is hard to figure out," wrote Realdeal of Southampton.

"Brown Publishing way overpaid for the paper in the first place. I believe the number was close to 7 mill. Tuff to make that back in this economic climate," wrote Tito of East Hampton.

(It was more than double that.)

"I grew up with Dan's...was great...then he brought into the scene and thought it could become about him. Forgot about the fundamentals..." wrote Kelly of Hampton Bays.

"Good riddance!" wrote John of Westhampton.

"For those of you above claiming to be ad-buy-

MEANDERING THROUGH THE HAMPTONS OUTBACK

By Dan Rattiner

It's all how you look at it. I dare say that most people who come out to the Hamptons consider the vast stretches of woods and dunes out here either as scenery to be treasured and prized or as an opportunity—for development—to divide it up and sell it off and make a profit, and move the economy just a little bit further forward.

And then there are others. Many years ago, two brothers from Leningrad got off a plane in John F. Kennedy Airport and called me up. I had met them during a long-ago trip to the Soviet Union. Now they were making me a visit. Surprise!

I drove into JFK and picked them up and brought them out. And as we were driving up Steven Hands Path toward my home, one of them looked out the window to all the summer homes nestled deep in those woods and asked me, simply "Those berries in there, good enough to eat?"

Thus do perspectives vary.

And yet, there is still another view of the woodlands and dunes of this community. Last Saturday morning, a sunny May morning, my wife and I dressed in hiking clothes and headed off to a place in Napeague that I know quite well—as a dirt road that heads out through some woods and dunes to the beach. But that was not the plan for that day.

Chris held up a half page she had torn out of Dan's Papers. It consisted of a map and some dotted lines and was accompanied by some copy from Ken Kindler, who writes a column about trails in the Hamptons.

"This one starts about two miles east of where ers—if you enjoy this website and the paper that owns it, why not consider advertising in quality papers like The Press. Your ad dollars can preserve an important community watchdog...Or if you already buy ads in local papers—upgrade your smaller ads to bigger ones!” wrote Mr. Suffolk (Twin Forks).

“Hmmm,” I thought. Who is writing these blogs anyway? Come to think of it, isn't it true that these blogs entries are censored by an employee of The Southampton Press? What else is this person doing?

Well, later on there came a time when it seemed to me the censor was going on coffee breaks leaving nobody minding the switch from time to time. Now there were bloggers who had come to the funeral and were rushing to defend me and the paper.

“You know what?” wrote Joe Hampton (Southampton), “I advertise in Dan's for over six years and I think it is a great value. Why is it you are always complaining about something?”

“I advertise in Dan's Papers every summer and it's a very important source of income,” wrote Roban of East Hampton. “I would not like to see it go under. It obviously is a source that is important to summer visitors as well. Yes the price is high, but so is the return on my investment.”

“Good luck Dan...We love you!!! All things aside. You are an institution and a lot of fun!!” wrote Kelly of Hampton Bays.

“Who will do those amazing stories about Monte Farber and Amy Zerner?” wrote ride the truth wave of Southampton. “Will the last local burn the last copy this winter in the woodstove, please!”

“Without Dan's Papers, how am I going to know who's turn it is to feed the shark?” wrote bird of Southampton.

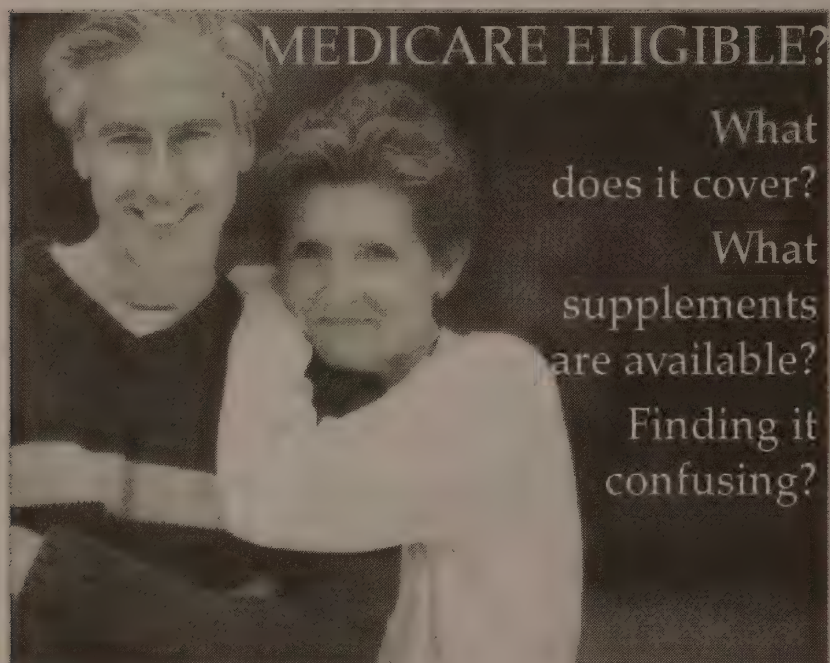

Finally, there was THIS post by 1168dposer of Water Mill. I think this explains it all.

“I normally don't get involved in the community here as you all have such a close relationship, one hates to intrude. However, this seems too good to miss out on. Having bought advertising for local businesses I worked for in the past (Sag Harbor, East Hampton, Bridgehampton) I have a pretty good feel of what the real “costs” are of all the papers out here—I have to laugh at the comments from those who think a paper that distributes under 10,000 or even under 20,000 is a better “value” than one that regularly prints over 30,000 (they claim 52,000 in some media kits but I know it's more like 35-42 year round) figure that out per 1,000 papers and you'll realize Dan's is a bargain.

“Don't get me wrong, The Press and even The Sag Harbor Express are excellent community papers and I've enjoyed The Star for a long time. However, Dan's is way different. They “cover” (although I don't consider them a real newspaper—more like a fun take on the local scene and entertaining reading) both forks and Montauk, support the artistic community out here strongly, give assistance to local benefits generously and since they don't take themselves so seriously the paper is easy to read for locals as well as visitors who don't care who just got elected to the local school board or where the local coffee shop can hang their new sign. Plus—they can't keep it on the stands—how often do you go looking for it on a Sunday and they are all gone? Even the 5 foot high stacks that are left frighteningly close to the doors at King Kullen are gone by late Saturday year round and Friday in the summer. I've lived here for over 30 years and people either love Dan or hate him—I've never bothered to have an opinion of the guy personally—plus I know that he sold the paper at least 2 times in the last dozen years so... other than his writing it's been out of his hands for a while. The point is the paper is read—it works for its advertisers and The Press readers and the Hamptons mag readers and everyone in between pick it up weekly. So right now it's PARENT company (Brown Publishing who is in Ohio, what The Press and Star are here—a venerable old family-owned business) has joined the ranks of hundreds of publishing companies across the country who are taking advantage of the ability to financially restructure—Brown is a huge company—not the smaller type of publishing co. like The Press or The Star who can only decrease the size of their broadsheet or cut back distribution to help with the financial crisis all newspapers are facing in this economy. Brown was/is large enough to work it out in other ways. Now I'll get off my soapbox and let my wife yell at me for not taking the dog out yet. Thanks for the entertainment from the regulars here—thought I'd enjoy some insight about the state of the economy or the positive/negative realities of companies being able to financially restructure and come out of it in better shape but the Dan bashing and in-fight-

STONY BROOK

No College

SUNY Stony Brook is Given Offer it Can't Refuse, but Does Anyway

By Dan Rattiner

Last Wednesday, the big meeting between President Samuel L. Stanley Jr. of Stony Brook University and our local political leaders took place to determine the future of Stony Brook Southampton College. The leaders were coming with an offer the President could not refuse. If he accepted it, the College would continue. If he rejected it, it would not.

Every single local leader in this area was present at the meeting. There was Congressman Bishop, Assemblyman Fred Thiele, Senator Ken LaValle, County Legislator Jay Schneiderman and Southampton Town Superintendant Anna Throne-Holst.

That the meeting took place, not in a neutral location, but in the office of Stony Brook University President Stanley in Stony Brook 60 miles from Southampton, made the local leaders appear as supplicants. It was not a good sign.

Here was the offer. Instead of closing Stony Brook Southampton College and saving a precious $6.1 million a year, Southampton Town would take $12.2 million from its Community Preservation Fund and give it to Stony Brook to keep it open. Then, in two years, Southampton Town would make arrangements for Stony Brook Southampton College to become an independent college under the umbrella of the State University of New York. Its name would change to Southampton College, without the Stony Brook.

It took 20 minutes to explain this plan to Dr. Stanley and one minute for him to refuse it. Our government leaders were in and out the door in less than half an hour. The man would not agree to have his cake and eat it too.

About 500 students are currently at Stony Brook Southampton College winding up their affairs. The college was founded by Dr. Stanley's predecessor, then-president Dr. Shirley Strum Kenny, five years ago. It would become the first college in the country dedicated to environmental sustainability. And it was put on track to be financially sustainable in five years with a student body levelling off

IMAGINE LIFE WITHOUT TELEPHONE POLES ...

By Dan Rattiner

It's been a long, wild off-season in the Hamptons and the main roads are full of potholes. It's caused by several factors. One was the huge variation in temperatures we experienced this winter, with days 15 below zero with the wind chill and other days with temperatures climbing into the 40s and 50s. Another big cause has been the heavy snow plowing that had to be done, with drifts along the roads piling up at some points to nearly nine feet this past January and February. The potholes are so big now that sometimes they make your car lurch dangerously to one side or the other as you go over them.

This situation has not been lost on those who care for the roads, but with government budgets slashed, nothing is getting done. You might think workers would be out there from President Obama's Shovel Ready Program since this would seem to be a perfect Shovel Ready situation, but they are not. The potholes remain. Nothing's been done.

As a matter of fact, I cannot think of one shovel ready program that has taken place out here on the East End. All the money our President is rolling off the presses for the shovelers is going elsewhere. That's just the way it is. But I can think of one Shovel Ready project that is just calling out to these federal brigades, wherever they might be.

Last month, in Montauk, local businessmen formed a study group to consider burying the telephone lines on the Main Street of that town for a distance of one mile. Permission would be needed from the Town and the State and Federal Highway people to do this. The lines would be buried between Grant Street and Second House Road along the highway there. The study group has concluded that this mile could be done for $800,000.

Most of the downtowns of our beautiful villages in the Hamptons extend for a mile or less, and I can think of only one of them that has all its power lines underground—and that is East Hampton. East Hampton, not long ago, was selected by a magazine as the most beautiful village in the United States and I think having its power lines underground is a part of what made it so.

But East Hampton is only one of the seven stunningly beautiful towns we have out here. Westhampton Beach rivals East Hampton in beauty, but it is marred by telephone wires and poles. Southampton, the oldest and largest jewel of a downtown, founded in 1640, is marred by telephone poles. Even Sag Harbor, a town largely built in the 19th Century during the whaling years, and a viring was almost as interesting."

With that, three days later, The Southampton Press posted an "update" of their web article. And now they were nearing telling the truth.

"Oh well, I guess we will still have Dan's Papers with the pompous articles and inaccurate reporting if you can call it reporting?" wrote ICE of Southampton.

"Dan's is part of the Hamptons. Each new issue was a signal of a new week," wrote artizt101 of Hampton Bays. "It's got to stay!"

And so on, and on and on, it went. For more, read the posts on our website, danspapers.com.

DAN'S PAPERS FILES FOR CHAPTER 11

The parent company of Dan's Papers, a weekly publication with offices in Bridgehampton, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection on Friday.

The board of directors of Brown Publishing Company made the decision that same day during a vote at Brown's headquarters in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Brown publishes a number of daily and weekly newspapers in Ohio and in 2007 acquired Dan's Papers, Inc., which also includes Montauk Pioneer and the Insider Guide.

Dan Rattiner, who started publishing weekly papers on the East End in the early 1960s and started Dan's Papers in the 1970s, deferred all comment to Brown Publishing.

Calls placed to Joel Dempsey, the vice president of general counsel for the company, were not returned Monday.

Cranberry Hole Road meets the Highway," she said. "And it is a glorious one and a quarter mile hike through the dunes and the woods—well marked from its starting point, which is where cars can park on the left right after turning in to drive down the sand road to the ocean."

"That's how I get to the beach out there," I said.

"It's gonna be you, me and the dog," she said determinedly. "We are taking this hike."

I've hiked before, though I can probably count the occasions on the fingers of my hands. I've hiked in Hawaii where we went up a gorge to a waterfall and I've hiked in Canada where we hiked up a small mountain near Banff and came upon, and then walked around, some black bears. I like hiking. But it does, at 70, tucker me out. But honestly, I had no idea that hiking like that could take place in the Hamptons. It turns out there is a whole web of trails you can hike. And Ken Kindler knows all about them.

We turned in and parked in the little lot there and I read a little bit about the trail we were about to tackle. It was an extension of a rum-runner's trail that ran north of the highway further east. It had been hacked through and marked—with little white Hiker's medallions and arrows nailed to trees by Mike Bottini, last September. A few places where small streams of water leaked out of the base of some huge ancient dunes at the most northerly part of the trail had wood bridges over them. It would not be hard to follow.

We were, on that day at 10 a.m., the only people parking in this little gravel lot. And earlier in the day, we had gotten the permit to park there by shelling out a few bucks at the Montauk Downs Golf Club, where the State of New York has an office for their park system. I left the permit on the dashboard of my car, as instructed. A curious ranger would see it and take note.

The trail heads away from the parking lot by heading east. It goes up and down some dunes and through some evergreen trees, but its been hacked out and it moves along quite well.

Early on along this trip, with my wife and dog marching ahead of me, I took note of my shadow, sticking out on the ground to the east. To the north 50 yards away were the tall ancient sand dunes. To the north further on than the ancient sand dunes would be the Montauk Highway. I could plainly hear the cars zipping past our little turnoff. It occurred to me that if we got lost on the trail, we could always head due north, which I reckoned would be about 80 degrees counterclockwise from where my shadow lay.

Important safety tip, I thought.

We both wore sneakers, pants with the bottoms tucked into our socks, shirts and sweaters. It was about 60 degrees. We had jackets on over that.

The trouble, we soon found out, was water. There had been torrential rains a few days earlier. I had been told the resulting floods were so bad that the Long Island Railroad could not get further east than Amagansett. Busses were taking passengers out to Montauk.

Water was flooding the trail. We soon came upon a white trail medallion tacked to a tree in the middle of a swamp. Our only choice was to swing around it to the north—clearly we couldn't go around it to the south toward the ocean—and that meant climbing the ancient dunes to get high enough where the water could not bother us.

The ancient dunes were clearly marked on the map. But the dotted lines headed east on their southern shoulder. We could, if we were careful, hike parallel to the markers but further upland. We did that.

It's amazing the things you see hiking along a trail. We walked through green lichen growing on rocks near the dunes and it crunched under our feet. We followed deer tracks for awhile. There were a few tall trees and some stands of pine. We walked through combinations of shade and sun. The water, when it was in evidence, was black and thick and still in its jagged swampland.

Occasionally, we would foray down toward the markers on the trees when there was no water in sight. The earth was soft and alternately grassy and covered with pine needles. It became a sort of game to try to find our way from one marker to the next while trying to get around the standing water. Sometimes we were able to do it. Sometimes we'd find ourselves on a peninsula of land with the marker on a tree in the water beyond, and we'd have to retreat back up to the dune and try to loop around.

Eventually, we got pretty far down to the south of the ancient dunes, and we were heading carefully along finding our way when at a certain point we simply lost sight of any markers on the trees. We went down one trail for a bit, then doubled back, then tried another trail and wound up not only without markers but on a peninsula.

At that moment, I thought we might have truly lost our way. You could hear the roar of the ocean one way, and you could, if you headed the other way, come upon the ancient dunes, but what if we trekked down at an angle and simply got ourselves further and further off course? We might be there all day trying to get out. I looked at my shadow.

FOUNDER OF NEWSPAPER LOST IN THE WOODS was the headline that flashed in my mind. ALONG WITH WIFE. AND DOG.

According to the map, we were now either at the farthest point from the start of the trail, at a place called Sycamore Stand, or beyond that farthest point.

Were there bears that came out at night? Obviously there were deer. Wolves?

Well, we did trace our steps, which was not so hard because you could see our sneaker treads in the sand or grass or mud pretty clearly along the way. At other times, when we could not see them, I found myself falling back on instinct.

"I think it's to the right," I said, pointing the way. I had taken the lead at this point. And soon enough the markers and the sneaker tracks reappeared.

I thought of other things along the way too. I thought of the silence, and the balance of nature in these dunes, and the wide variety of things we had seen. Native Americans, 500 and more years ago, walked these dunes—and they stopped just where we did for a rest, on a large boulder that served as an outcropping of one of the dunes. Those long-ago natives would need no maps or guides. They would know all these things along the way.

We finally made our way back to the starting point about an hour after we started, and I was delighted to see another couple in a new pickup truck hop out. The man was in stretch pants and shirt. The wife was similarly attired and had a little baby with her. She intended to carry him.

I was delighted to see that they too had a copy of Ken Kindler's map from Dan's Papers. I felt like I might be helpful to them, now that we had tested the waters, so to speak.

"The flooding is pretty bad over here," I said, pointing to the first part, "so you stay on the ancient dunes. Then you can get down to here where it says Sycamore Stand, but that's where we could find no more markers, so you might have to turn back the way you came."

"Thanks for the tip, Dan," the man said. "We enjoy your paper. We'll be fine. We just finished a six mile bike ride."

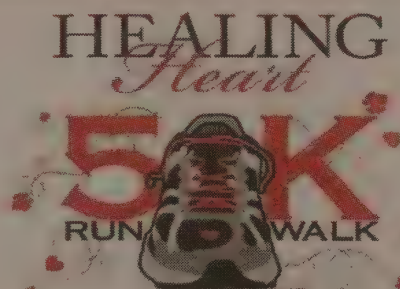

When we got home, my wife and I took off all our clothes, threw them in a pile and took them down to the basement to be washed in the laundry. We then checked ourselves for ticks—I found two, she found one, and we dressed in fresh clothes.

Mission accomplished.

The Hamptons Goes to the Tribeca Film Fest

Billy Joel in a scene from The Last Play at Shea; Right, Matt Bush and Ed Burns on the set in the Hamptons for Nice Guy Johnny.

By Gina Glickman

After enduring what felt like a never ending, cold winter season, I was excited to get back into the mix and attend The Ninth Annual Tribeca Film Festival which recently kicked off opening night in Midtown at the Zeigfeld Theater with the premiere of Shrek 4: Forever After, The Final Chapter. Several notable guests including, "Scrubs" stars Zac Braff and Donald Faison with girlfriend CaCee Cobb, and Andrew McCarthy (Brat Pack), scurried down the over 200-foot-long press line to work their way inside the landmark theater and witness everyone's favorite giant green ogre in 3D.

As the stars of the film, Mike Myers, Antonio Banderas, Eddie Murphy and Cameron Diaz, worked the green carpet, I recognized just how much this festival has evolved since its inception in 2002. The first launch was packed with a very specific mission, to entertain and revive the downtown area post September 11. I asked The "Mayoress," as Bono playfully nicknamed the festival Co-Founder Jane Rosenthal, "What part of the festival has evolved the most over the years?" She modestly replied, "For me it's that people actually show up!"

This year, thousands of guests from all over the world showed up to experience the work of more than 50 new filmmakers. A turnout that had to make the "mayor" of the festival, Co-Founder Robert De Niro very happy, "I really like the Street Festival, that is a great community thing," said De Niro. Even though I knew that he's a habitué of the Hamptons, I asked De Niro if he ever made it out to Long Island. He replied, "What's Long Island?" He laughed and then made his signature character face, turning down the corners of his mouth and reluctantly nodding his head up and down, and gesturing to his wife, Grace Hightower, "Yeah, we have a place out there. We go out there a lot." Funny, the "Mayoress" also revealed she has a home in Bridgehampton, "We love to go to the beach at 5p.m. when everyone else is leaving, and watch the sunset."

Now, I know we are supposed to be celebrating NYC's TRIangle Below CANal Street, at 1,500. It was keeping to that track.

Dr. Kenny was dedicated to the liberal arts and to the importance of educating our children of college age. Indeed, when she came into office 25 years earlier, she came into a crisis. The National University Accreditation Board was threatening to pull SUNY Stony Brook's license to offer liberal arts degrees because Stony Brook had become a sort of lackey to the scientific institutions that were thriving in central Long Island at that time. The Brookhaven National Lab and the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory had such close ties to Stony Brook that it seemed to make other studies impossible. Dr. Kenny restored the liberal arts curriculum at Stony Brook and the threat receded.

Dr. Stanley, a physician with close ties to business and science on Long Island, was perhaps a poor choice to succeed Dr. Kenny. By his actions, he clearly intends to return Stony Brook and Stony Brook Southampton, which will be temporarily mothballed, into what will now be an adjunct campus for conferences and meetings from Stony Brook.

For 500 students who came here to study the environment, and to learn how to become leaders in the coming fight to save this planet from being inhospitable to human beings, this is a crushing blow.

It was his decision to shut down our college. And by his actions in refusing the money—that he says was the reason he was shutting it down—he shows his true colors.

tual restored antique of that era, has telephone poles. Then there are the smaller communities, Amagansett, Bridgehampton, Water Mill and Hampton Bays, which complete the chain of ancient downtowns extending the 60 miles to the Montauk Lighthouse—all with ugly wires and telephone poles in their downtowns.

I think $800,000 to put lines underground along a one-mile stretch is not much money at all. I do understand that, unlike the one-mile stretch in Montauk where you can slit trench the power cables along the highway there; you'd have to dig up curbs and road shoulders to do it in the other downtowns. Consider that might involve another $100,000 in guys (and girls) doing some trenching. It's still a bargain, and with people out of jobs it would not be hard to find workmen to do this.

I know we take telephone poles for granted and at this point don't even notice them. But I can tell you, when the telephone lines are down, whether you notice it or not, you feel yourself living in a magical, historic and magnificent community of ponds, fields, ocean beaches and farms, as this place not long ago was.

Someday soon, this will happen.

(Tribeca) but I couldn't help but notice the many Long Island and Hamptons connections to the people or films at the festival. Writer, director and Long Island native, Ed Burns premiered his latest film, Nice Guy Johnny, which was shot entirely in the Hamptons. Burns shared, "I know it so well, I picked all my favorite spots, nothing but great locations and everyone was so warm and friendly to us!"

The next day, after Burns' film premiered, his wife, supermodel-turned-director, Christy Turlington, premiered her first film, No Woman No Cry, to a packed theater, which included U2's Bono and The Edge. Turlington admitted, "Eddie's film takes place in the Hamptons and we watched it last night at the premiere. It just make me crave summer time in the Hamptons. We base our family out there for the summer. It's very family, very low key. I've come to really love it."

Beware of Gonzo was another film at the festival that's getting rave reviews and was also created by two Long Islanders, first-time writer/director Bryan Goluboff and his childhood friend, producer and entertainment lawyer, Craig Cohen. According to Cohen, "Long Island was the impetus for the creative concept. Bryan and I have been friends since we were eight years old. We grew up in Valley Stream and then our parents moved to Merrick. We went to Bellmore Kennedy High School, and that's where the genesis of this story began."

Cohen, who currently lives in Dix Hills, goes out to the Hamptons every weekend during the summer. His favorite spot to have brunch is Babette's.

The Hamptons/LI connection continued, starting The Piano Man himself, Billy Joel, in The Last Play at Shea. I don't know if it's the Long Island school system, the water, or just the close proximity to NYC, but this "Long Island Effect" is pretty real. Just in the TV/film industry alone, we have some amazing, award-winning talent: Alec Baldwin, Rosie O'Donnell, Judd Apatow, Billy Crystal, Gina Glickman (just making sure you are paying attention).

So, there you have it, a preview to the celebrities and stars that call the Hamptons their second home, in a sneak preview at the Tribeca Film Festival. We'll soon see them out East more and more. Starting Memorial Day, my column "Whispers" will keep you informed of their activities in the Hamptons.

Gina Glickman is a TV host, director, writer, executive producer and founder of GMG Entertainment. Look out for Gina starring in the Ninth season of the hit series, News 12 Long Island's "What's Hot in the Hamptons."

Discovering Your History—Online

By Stacy Dermont

Southampton is the oldest English settlement in New York State, so when it comes to Southampton history, there's a whole lot of it. Over 370 years worth in fact, in the form of thousands of deeds, maps, legal records, photos, blue prints, vital statistics and the odd artifact, are all housed in Southampton Town Hall.

Last month Southampton Town hired its first professional historian, Zachary Studenroth. Studenroth is particularly well suited to Southampton's needs because his background is in Architectural History. He holds a Masters in Historical Preservation from Columbia University and has been working on Long Island preservation projects since the late

Schermeyer and Studenroth

Studenroth also serves as the Executive Director of the Sag Harbor Whaling and Historical Museum. His popular tours of cemeteries and old homes make him a familiar face around the Hamptons. His new position is within the town clerk's historic division, helping to oversee historic research and historic records management and preservation.

Southampton Town Clerk Sundry Schermeyer says she began negotiations to hire Studenroth over a year ago. Schermeyer avers, "My office is all about public accessibility."

This town appointment re-enforces Southampton's forward thinking approach to preserving, and sharing, its rich history. Last year Town Clerk Schermeyer began placing the Southampton Town Records on the web site southamptontown.ny.gov. Studenroth now coordinates this ongoing scanning project. This work will save the town money by allowing people direct access to records without the need for staff supervision. The new system can also save employees and private citizens money on travel, because more and more of the records can be found in cyberspace. People can now do research from the comfort of their own homes, as their schedules allow.

Traditionally local history research has been an arduous, time-consuming task. Research has been limited by the given archive's hours of operation and limited by being contained in fragile books and documents. Now anyone can view the town records dating back to the first recorded meeting in 1639. So far six of the eight volumes of town record books have been scanned. Currently Volume 7, Part 2 is in the works, Part 2 alone is 500 pages long. The scanned records are downloadable, so they can be printed out or sent electronically. Schermeyer suggests that the amateur researcher "has to be creative with his spelling" to find what he's looking for. The books are also being reprinted in-house and are available for purchase from the clerk's office.

Southampton Town now borrows documents from other archives, copies them and returns them. Each time a document is copied, a digital version of the image is also given to the owner organization. This has already included a rare 1916 oversize map, which had been cut into quarters and reassembled with tape many years ago. The Southampton team was able to scan the images back together and clean up the visual pollution of the aging tape. The result is a beautiful and useable map.

Studenroth said "Individual historical societies can't afford their own large-size scanners but we're available to them as a resource. I'm also available as a speaker to educate about preservation. There are some basic dos and don'ts. Plus we look to individuals and societies to help move our work forward. Right now we'd like to hear from anyone who might know when Southampton's Flanders was first called by that name and why. So far we've traced its use back to the late 18th century. We're also interested in any vintage photographs of area gravestones." Schermeyer added, "Hampton Bays Historical

A Mysterious Oil Spill, Close to Home

By T.J. Clemente

The record rains of March washed up many undesirable things on Long Island. In the historic Village of Sag Harbor on Bay Street, where in the past stood an oil depot, the rains brought oil bubbling up and streaming through the road during the first week in April.

Unlike Jed Clampett's windfall, this is not a new source of much needed bubblin' crude, but perhaps vestiges of a scandal—of a job done not very well by big oil in the 1990s when they left Sag Harbor.

With satellite photos nightly showing the impending long-term disaster caused by an imploded Gulf of Mexico off shore oil well, big oil seems to be scoring defeat from the jaws of what seemed an impending victory. Only a week after President Obama announced his administration's openness to revisiting offshore drilling, did the worst case scenario concerning an offshore well become realized. Some may see it as divine intervention (although a source no greater in expertise than Rush Limbaugh claims the environmentalists themselves sabotaged the well to defeat off shore drilling.)

But the black eye of petroleum pollution also seems to have reached the heart of Sag Harbor. The Village's Mayor, Brian Gilbride, reportedly is not happy—he didn't even answer a call to address this situation which is uncharacteristic of him. New York State

Susan Galardi

Assemblyman Fred Thiele, however, did reply saying, "The seepage of oil at the former Mobil Oil site in the village of Sag Harbor is of great concern. Village residents had been assured by the Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) that this site had been fully cleaned up. It now appears that might not be the case. It is imperative that the source of the seepage be discovered and that it be remedied as quickly as possible." Carolina A. Asirifi, of ExxonMobil Environmental Services, had this to say this week about the situation "As we discussed, ExxonMobil was asked to assist based on our historic presence in the area. In an effort to progress the collective understanding of the situation, ExxonMobil will voluntarily conduct an investigation in the area where the seeps were observed. The investigation will include soil and groundwater sampling. ExxonMobil will use the data and records obtained to help identify the potentially responsible party and the potential source. Lastly, we are working cooperatively with the New York State DEC and the Village agencies."

Asirifi would not speculate how long this fact-finding process may be, what actions would be taken when the source of the problem was discovered, nor what the dangers are to the community based on the present situation.

At the time of the spill this past April, Dan Grapski, a project manager for ExxonMobil on site, reportedly said, "There seems to be some sort of product, either the result of a spill in the area or seeping up from under ground. We're looking right now to clean up things so we can determine where it is coming from—and see if it comes back." The first step was to pump thousands of gallons of rainwater out of the wells to stop the oil from flowing out.

Grapski also reportedly explained that a massive remediation project was undertaken by ExxonMobil back in the mid 1990s. "In order to clean spilled petroleum from the property's soil, the site was excavated and the soil was incinerated to burn off the petroleum the soil contained."

The Waters of March Mean a Summer of Ticks

By T.J. Clemente

This last winter saw crazy amounts of both rain and snow, with March boasting record rain-falls across the area, and you know how boastful March is already, with that "in like a lion" slogan. Veteran Springs resident and former Dean of Southampton Chuck Hitchcock proclaimed that the lion/lamb month brought, "The worst flooding I have seen in my 43 years out here." With all this in mind I tapped into the ultimate East End resource, Larry Penny, East Hampton's Director of Natural Resources—a job title he has lived for over 25 years, if not most of his adult life.

Penny keeps track of rainfall, leaf colorization, the population of wild turkeys, deer and almost single handedly started the preservation locally of the piping plover. His is the go-to guy for assessing the effects of the record rainfall on the local ecosystem. In his signature raspy voice, Penny acknowledged that the flooding was as extensive as he had ever experienced and he'd soon be releasing Gambusia in many local large flooded ponds. Gambusia are "mosquitofish" the size of guppies, each one capable of ingesting 1,000 mosquito larvae per week. Having done this in the past Penny believes it will help curtail the numbers of mosquitos this summer.

He also predicted a bigger than usual deer tick season not because of the floods but because of the record amounts of acorns last fall that the turkeys and deer use as feed. Penny puts deer population in east Hampton at around 4,000, and wild turkey population at about 1,500. However, he expects them both to "spike upward," this year due to the record acorn fall.

The generous hosts

He also noted that the town's fox population (mostly red fox) has decreased to about 10. The waste of both the deer and the turkey is the nourishment of white footed mice, which are a host of the deer tick larvae. Therefore Penny is warning all to be especially vigilant about ticks.

He explained that there are now three major ticks in the Hamptons: the deer tick, the wood tick (the big ones you pull off dogs) and the new-to-the-area Lone Star tick (Amblyomma americanum), named for its white spot.

Lone Star ticks are aggressive. While they don't carry Lyme disease, their bites cause rashes and lead to fatigue, headaches fever and muscle joint pains. Penny mentioned that Lone Star ticks can be traced to cases of meningitis. Recently, deer ticks have been causing symptoms akin to malaria, called Babesiosis, prompting treatment with anti-malaria antibiotics.

I had that experience myself a few seasons ago. Within 36 hours of a tick bite, in addition to seeing a huge dark circle, I found myself on the floor unable to move, sweating with fever and freezing with chills at the same time. Luckily I responded quickly (three days) to the antibiotics. In over 50 years in the woods, hiking, mountain climbing and trekking I had never experienced anything like it, BEWARE!

By definition Babesiosis is a parasitic infection carried in mice and other rodents. The disease, carried to humans by ticks, attacks the red blood cells and causes symptoms often mistaken for the flu. Unlike Lyme Disease, with its distinctive bulls eye-shaped rash, tick bites carrying Babesiosis are often undetected. Symptoms appear one to six weeks after a tick bite and can last several weeks or months. Dr. Peter Krause, of the University of Connecticut School of Medicine at Farmington, said, "Symptoms resemble the flu: fatigue, appetite loss, fever, chills, muscle pains and headaches, we are concerned that it may be more widespread than we have previously thought." Babesiosis was recognized in the Northeast in the 1960s and became endemic by the 1980s in Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard, Shelter Island and parts of Long Island, as well as other areas along the Northeastern coast. Penny said he believes there has been an increase in the East Hampton area in recent years.

Treatment of severe infection has had only limited success, according to the Center for Disease Control (CDC), but if properly diagnosed, the disease can be treated in earlier stages because of its similarity to malaria. A & Preservation Society is taking a very active approach to gravesite preservation. We'll be unveiling the results of that project soon."

Investing in local history has proven a sound investment for municipalities across the country. The wholly preserved Colonial Williamsburg in Virginia is an extreme example of how to drive historical tourism. Celebrations of local history, from signs designating historic landmarks to major festivals, drive tourism and vacation home sales as well as local shopping and dining.

Studenroth has been instrumental in the coming together of "the big five", as our area professional historical societies have been dubbed. On behalf of the Sag Harbor Whaling Museum, Studenroth has been meeting with the executive directors of the Suffolk County Historical Society based in Riverhead, the Southampton Historical Society, the Bridgehampton Historical Society and the East Hampton Historical Society since 2008 to plan a major event titled "Stirring the Pot" to take place in 2011. This joint effort will celebrate the whole of the South Fork's food history including farming, fishing, hunting, brewing, distilling and winemaking, as well as all forms of food preparation and preservation.

It's a lot to chew.

Studenroth is in his office, "the vault", every Tuesday and Thursday, the phone number there is 631-702-2406.

the soil contained."

Jim Early, Sag Harbor Village's current superintendent of public works, went a few steps further in appraising the situation in those early hours back in the mid '90s. He said that, at the time, the oil company put in "these big tumblers that tumbled the soil around while it was incinerated and then put it back in the ground," adding that, back then, problems occurred after heavy, intense rains that were similar to the situation this past April.

On the reassuring side, at the time of the recent spill, Gilbride said there were no signs of oil in the nearby surface waters of Sag Harbor Cove. However, since then there has been no official update on that status. In an off-the-record response, someone in the know said that if there were such a danger, steps would have already been taken.

In the meantime, ExxonMobile's Asirifi has promised to be available throughout the process to answer any questions as the research findings become more definitive. ExxonMobil seems to understand the importance of righting this situation if it's determined they are at fault. Hopefully, soon, it will be Mayor Gilbride who can claim a success for thoroughly addressing this Sag Harbor dilemma. As he said to me just before he was sworn in last July, "I swam in the local beaches as a kid. I care about the beaches."

I believed him then, I still do.

combination of Clindamycin and quinine kills the infection, although newer combination therapy is available with fewer side effects. Prevention is, of course, the best approach. Dr. Krause also said, "Persons living in areas where ticks carry Babesiosis need to be aware of this, just as they are now more aware of Lyme Disease. For those over age 50 and the immunocompromised, any flu-like symptoms after being in wooded areas need to be evaluated, diagnosed and treated as soon as possible...Diagnostic tests are still fairly new so diagnosis is difficult. So if you go into the woods beware, be alert and watch out for the mud and flooded areas."

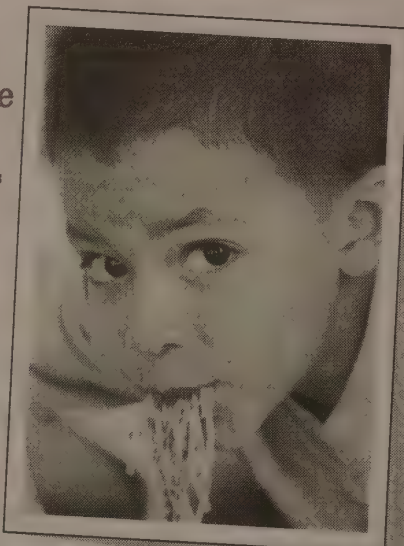

Long Island children are hungry and the need is critical.

Even a small gift can make a large difference to a hungry family.

Now, more than ever, your fellow Long Islanders are in need of help from their neighbors. Lost jobs, closed businesses, down-sizing, foreclosures... all have led to more people, adults and children, with empty plates on their tables.

Your donation, even as little as $10, can feed a hungry child for a week.

While 97 cents out of every dollar contributed to Island Harvest goes directly to Long Island's hungry, more contributions are needed to keep up with the demand.

Givin' You the BUSINESS

By T.J. Clemente

Coming to the Poxabogue Golf Center, soon after Memorial Day, will be the Love Lane Café, an extension of the brand Love Lane Kitchen, in Mattituck, considered by some to be one of the best restaurants on the North Fork. Love Lane Kitchen owner Michael Avella said there are some issues concerning the condition of the restaurant (vandalism) to be cleared up with the Town of Southampton. Avella hopes to continue the breakfast traditions of the former Fairway Restaurant with some upgrades in service, quality of food, coffee and ambiance, in line with his critically acclaimed establishment on the North Fork. In fact, Avella informed me that the talented Culinary Institute graduate Jennilee Morris, presently the general manager of Love Lane Kitchen, will be coming to the South Fork to run Love Lane Café. He called Morris, "Key to my success and a wonderful personality."

He explained that his formula is one he learned in the bistros and local trattorias of Modena, Italy, where Avella spent 10 great years of his life. "You serve the fresh, in season, local produce, creatively, smartly, priced in a very cost wise way. It's healthy, delicious and affordable."

Being Italian himself, and after spending that decade in Italy, Avella has lasered in especially on one particular "detail"—coffee. It's very important within the Love Lane Brand and Avella will continue that tradition at the Café.

As a 15-year resident of Southampton, of course Avella has had breakfast at Fairway and understood its unique niche in the community. "I respect what they did, and I believe the Love Lane way of doing things will only enhance the experience of those who come for breakfast and lunch." He explained that the ever changing menus and specials has kept regulars at the Love Lane Kitchen interested and kept predictability to a minimum—except when it comes to quality. "Our continued success speaks volumes for the quality of service Love Lane Café will bring to the Poxabogue," Avella said.

A visit to the Kitchen's website provided me with an insight into what's to come. One writer said he loved the simplicity with elegance that had his ever-demanding mother saying, "This is how all restaurants used to be." Another said wonderful things about Jennilee Morris, while yet another talked about how they make ice coffee by freezing it and then serving it semi-melted. The person wrote, "After a hot bike ride we were thrilled and chilled by that ice coffee." Avella hopes to bring that atmosphere to the new place. "At Love Lane Café our young staff will create a new tradition of quality dining and personal service with affordable prices." The great lobster rolls, Pad Thai and Cuban sandwiches, as well as standards such as their Kaiseki Bento Dinner, which is a selection of Japanese dishes prepared in a traditional Bento Box, will most likely be offered as well as local, fresh breakfast eggs prepared the way you want them, often with famous Long Island potahtoes.

Avella said the interior will be similar to the California-Cape Cod feel of his North Fork establishment, with white paint, white enamel tiles and authentic barn wood tabletops. One change in the former Fairway space will be the raising of the short counter where some guests didn't enjoy the below-the-belt view of those working behind the counter.

Avella calls his experiences serving the East End a "Heritage of Hospitality." Like the Love Lane Kitchen, the Café will be open 52 weeks a year—in fact Love Lane Kitchen is closed only on Christmas Day. At first the Café will serve only breakfast and lunch. At this writing there is no liquor license, however Avella sees that scenario being resolved within the first year, just as it was at the Love Lane Kitchen.

Married and in his mid 50s, Avella was born on Staten Island, is proud that even during these difficult times, the Love Lane Brand has done well, with sales strong and steady. "Doing this," he said, "I am never going to get rich like Wall Street people, but I make a wonderful, healthy living. I really enjoy walking around amongst my dining friends each evening. Sometimes I feel guilty that I have to present them with a bill, but it is a business too."

Fairway was a wonderful local tradition whose time came and now is gone. The Love Lane Café will hopefully fill that niche, and elevate it to something more than a friendly, nice place to get a quick bite.

Divorce Fair: Italian Style

Reuters Wed May 5, 3:21 pm ET
MILAN (Reuters Life!) - Italy is holding its first divorce fair, offering services such as life coaching and beauty advice to a booming number of separating couples in the Catholic country. The organizers said the fair, which will be held in Milan on May 8-9, aims to help divorcing people start a new, happier life. "Smiling is key to this fair, which also offers serious, practical advice for often dramatic situations," Franco Zanetti, who created the event, told Reuters. The services include divorce planning, anti-stalking help, and "new look" tips, the organizers said.

Divorce Fair: Island Style

Divorce Lite. Separated, both still living on the Island, but haven't bothered filing for a divorce because the tax benefits are better as a couple. The Divorce Lite couple still talk to each other and are civil in all public situations. No food fights at the Fireman's BBQ. No fighting over who gets the kids—each parent takes turns with the creeps. No dating in-laws. Dating your spouse's first cousins is acceptable and even damn near unavoidable on Shelter Island. And she still gets to call him with any car problems.

Divorce Regular. Both parties still live on the Island and for the most part are civil to each other. Exchanging barbs or the finger in public on occasion is acceptable, but no fighting in the IGA check out line. Each parent still has to take a turn with the kids, although they can pretend they want more time with the little darlings just to irritate the other person. Dating former brother- or sister-in-laws for revenge is acceptable, but not recommended—it's easier and less complicated just to key the other person's car. She has to call him with car problems or listen to a big lecture on how she chose an idiot to repair the car.

Divorce Invisible. Both still live on the Island, each pretends the other does not exist. They can sit together anywhere because they can't speak a single word to each other without it erupting into exactly where they left off during the last fight. They only communicate through e-mails so each has a chance to thoroughly overanalyze what the other didn't mean or is trying not to say. Their children are not pawns in the game because the kids have their own system worked out in which their parents are pawns.

Divorce Severe. This couple has divided everything in half perfectly and each swears the other got more. They even divided the ferries—one gets the North Ferry and one gets the South Ferry. Both are determined to stay on the Island and drive the other one off. They work hard to date the person their former spouse hates the most on Shelter Island. They don't have to stalk the former spouse because everyone on the Island lets them know where they saw his or her car last. The CIA could take lessons in brilliant espionage from angry divorced couples on the Island. She'd never call him for car assistance, because given the chance, he'll drive her car into the bay.

Divorce Do Overs. Formerly divorced couples who remarry after some years of dating other people. They slowly come to the conclusion that unless something is terribly deranged in their former spouses, it's a lot easier to stay with someone you're used to and vice versa, than to train a whole new person to bend to your will. And once again, she has the joy of walking in and saying, "Honey, the car's making a funny noise." She listens to a few curses and goes to start dinner knowing he'll take care of it.

ESTATE OF MIND

Real Estate Rants and Rumbblings

By T.J. Clemente

There's a dispute going on between two very wealthy neighboring properties on Further Lane that late author James Brady would jump at the chance to write about. A friend from the Blue Parrot who lived on the Lane, Brady wrote the novel Further Lane, which profiled the people who actually inhabited the homes on that sacred, twisting oceanfront road.

What's currently going on could be one of two things, depending on your point of view. It's either one citizen's right to use their resources to resolve a dispute, or a gross abuse of the system by the very rich. At issue in the dispute, which positions the interest of former Yahoo CEO Terry Semel against former hedge fund executives Peter and Jonathon Sobel, is a cottage on Semel's property. With a legal certificate of occupancy (CO) in hand, Semel seems to be inhabiting a cottage that was expanded while the main house on the property is being completed. The Sobels' protest to the zoning board of appeals (ZBA) is that they want the CO issued on Semel's cottage to be revoked. It was reported that the Sobels presented evidence at the hearing that a kitchen was created for the cottage that did not previously exist in the structure, thus altering the building's status. Their effort hinged on the argument that the original cottage was an "accessory structure," not a pre-existing nonconforming structure. It seems that, under the law, an accessory structure can be up to 600 sq ft, but now, Semel's structure after renovations is 1,900 sq ft. In addition to the "accessory structure vs. pre-existing nonconforming structure," argument, according to the Sobels' attorney, only one actual house is permitted on the property. (Amazingly enough, Semel's main house will be just shy of 10,000 square feet according to reports).

Titans Clash over Further Lane Oceanfront

A former Town of East Hampton official familiar with the Sobels said she was not surprised. Over the last 10 years she said that the Sobels have used hearings to dispute neighbors' trees, a berm and a fence. "They think they own 50 acres instead of 4-5 acres," the source said. "Even now, they're also disputing a walk through the dunes by another neighbor. They need to realize they have neighbors, and get over it."

Another view from another person familiar with the situation is that some people have way too much money and too much time to pursue such matters. He said, "Rank and wealth has its privileges," and proceeded to tell me of the story of Nelson Rockefeller's Fifth Avenue apartment. The story goes like this: Rockefeller's master bathroom flooded and leaked into the apartment below. The insurance company sued for the cost of the repairs to the apartment below, only to be frustrated by the sitting Governor and one of New York's wealthiest gentleman lawyers. The saga goes that the two neighbors finally met at a cocktail party, and Rockefeller, hearing of the problem for the first time, stepped in personally and a check was in the hands of the neighbor's insurance company by noon the next day. This is not the case between the Sobels and Terry Semel. If F. Scott Fitzgerald was correct when he said "the rich are different," he was also surely referring to the way they fight border disputes. Semel, a titan in international business, hired a top local legal eagle to maintain his CO. His main attorney, William Esseks, reportedly presented affidavits from three former Town of East Hampton Attorneys

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Allergies

I thought I was dying. My nose was like a running faucet. I couldn't keep my eyes open without squinting, even if I slept nine hours the night before. I wheezed when I breathed. I'd felt slow. My only solace was a shower of scalding water splashing through my face. I felt weak and unfocused. I know what's happening. There is a horrible, horrible disease and it is killing me slowly. It's not allergies, it can't be.

I've never believed in allergies, although I've had them most of my life. I've gone through believing that allergies were a kind of a weakness. If I were in the wild, living off the land and hunting with a spear, finding an allergy medication would be impossible. Me have an allergy? Impossible. It must be something else. I must not be getting enough Vitamin B.

I just never really believed that when others complained about their allergies, that they were complaining about something that was so miserably dramatic. The word allergy is in the same field as scratch, bruise and cough. No big deal. Goes away on its own if you let it.

But the pollen this year is like nature's war against my respiratory system. There's so much pollen in the air that it's coating our cars with a thick yellow silt—like the dust that occurs after a large nuclear explosion. It's pure death.

I was feeling so sick that I went to my doctor. I was emotionally prepared for the diagnosis of death. "You have death mountain face blood disease, you'll be dead in a week."

"Party on. Time to hit Hawaii."

I went through the whole conversation in my head. But then at the office he asked me a basic question, "Were you ever tested for allergies?"

"Nope."

"Hmmm. Well let's get you tested, in the meantime, take this and let me know how you feel in a few days."

Allergies? What the hell? What is wrong with this doctor? It's death mountain face blood disease I tell ya.

Screw it.

I took the Allegra-D and waited. Stupid pills, nothing works. Doctors are such a waste of money.

And then, about an hour later, I was doing something I haven't done in years. I was breathing through my nose. "My God."

The song, "Zippity-Doo-Daa" started to go off in my head. Could this be? Was this happening? A few hours later in the day, my eyes opened wider, and then after buying some allergy eye drops, I could open my eyes completely. My forehead relaxed, my face relaxed, it was like a wave of anti-stress splashed over the top of my head.

This is what it feels like to be really into yoga, I thought.

I don't know why I never thought it was allergies making my face feel like Freddy Kruger's. I guess I like to overthink things.

God bless allergy meds. God bless the world. Things are looking up. It's a brand new day.

who explained that the expansion was sort of routine on estates of such size. The attorney, Denise Schoen of Tarbet, Lester and Schoen, who reportedly worked on obtaining the CO, argued that the cottage is a "dwelling unit."

The Sobels countered with their own local legal expertise stating that the construction of a kitchen plus the increased square footage alters the status of building from "accessory structure" to "house." The brilliant and thorough Brian Matthews, representing the Sobels, explained that a motel room is considered a dwelling unit, and since the cottage has a kitchen, the cottage becomes a single family home, and town statutes allow only one residence per residential property. Otherwise, the Sobels' position infers, pool houses, garages and gardening sheds will be converted to residential homes on the local estates. That argument was reportedly expanded upon by another Sobel attorney, David Egan, in a sort of "what happens if you allow two houses on one residential property?" presentation.

A final decision on the matter should be reached in around eight weeks. Reports have put Semel's expenses at around $4 million for work on the main house and cottage so far. One can only guess what the legal expenses are. A former town official said both sides in the dispute have merit and believes the final decision is a tough call. I believe the original CO will not be revoked, but will remain, with some compromises.

The East Hampton Town Republicans proudly honor their retiring Chairman

John L. Behan

for his courageous service to our country, state and town—and for our magnificent election victory.

By the Book

By Rebeca Schiller

New York City apartment owners might recognize their neighbors, co-op board members, or even themselves in Twelve Rooms with a View, the second novel by playwright and screenwriter Theresa Rebeck, who takes a vicious, but amusing look at Manhattan's cutthroat real estate market.

Narrated by the main character, Tina Finn, Twelve Rooms opens at a funeral where Tina and her sisters, Lucy and Alison, suddenly discover they've inherited from their alcoholic mother the famous 12-room Livingston Mansion Apartment (supposedly valued at $11 million) located at the historic Edgewood Building on the Upper West Side.

Tina is persuaded by her socially ambitious sister Lucy to move into the apartment to stake their claim. Soon afterwards the hapless younger sister finds herself caught in the middle of an all out real estate war between members of the co-op board who want to evict Tina, and in an acrimonious legal battle with the two sons of her mother's second husband, Bill, who dispute the sisters' inheritance.

Wanting to play nice and sway the co-op board members to her side, Tina befriends Len a conniving and duplicitous botanist; Vince, the flirtatious son of the co-op board president; and Jennifer, the depressed teenage daughter of one of the board members, who becomes Tina's eyes and ears during the eviction process. In the meantime, Tina also deals with Lucy's bossy demands on how to behave.

Review: Twelve Room with a View

Rebeck's marvelously captures the conflict and tension between Tina and Lucy, a manipulative public relations executive whose sole ambition is to sell the apartment in a down market. Tina aptly describes her unhappy sister:

She smiled grimly, as if she found it satisfactory to hear me "okay," but she didn't look satisfied. She looked like her suit was too tight and she wasn't eating enough red meat and her shoes hurt. She had gray smudges under her eyes, and her hair was pulled back in a bun, which was an extremely bad look for her; and usually she knew better than to try it. Her mouth was pinched together, bitter and worried, and for the first time I saw what Vince had seen instantly under the skin of my smart, ferocious sister: an old schoolmarm in a rage because the world had overlooked her.

Even when Tina offers a solution to stop a potential lawsuit over the apartment, Rebeck skillfully conveys Lucy's disrespect for her younger sister's suggestion:

"Hey Lucy," I said feeling completely awful all of a sudden. "No kidding, Lucy. Maybe we could just offer to split it with them. Even split five ways, we'll all end up with a ton of money. Has anyone offered a split?"

"I don't believe that's been discussed, no," she said, with a kind of infantile brightness that had yet another sneer behind it.

"Yeah, I guess that's pretty stupid," I said. "Sorry. 'Compromise.' What a boneheaded idea." "You said it, not me," she murmured under her breath.

She left. And I decided to stop asking questions nobody had any answers for anyway and just let things happen.

Subplots abound in Twelve Rooms, and include a cast of characters like the battling brothers, Pete and Doug, who want their childhood home and harbor a secret about their mother—the apartment's original owner; the eccentric botanist neighbor, Len, who rents out Tina's kitchen for his moss garden and has a tumultuous relationship with his daughter Charlotte; the snobbish Mrs. Gideon who aggressively campaigns for Tina's eviction; and the harried and put upon Hispanic doorman Frank who is hopelessly in love with the sweet and beautiful Julianna Gideon; and even a ghost gets a little playtime. The problem with all these ancillary storylines is that we're getting them all from Tina's limited perspective and many questions that come up, go unanswered.

Twelve Rooms with a View ultimately comes to a satisfactory, but somewhat rushed conclusion. It's almost as if Rebeck suddenly realized or was reminded that she needed to neatly tie up the subplots and give readers closure. Although many of the events that occur are highly exaggerated, there is a very big grain of truth in New York's vicious world of real estate. Maybe renting isn't such a bad idea after all.

#1 CENTRAL AIR CONDITIONING QUESTION REPAIR OR REPLACE ?

When it comes to improving our homes, it's natural to always want the best value for our money. With this in mind, it's important to take into consideration the following choices when it comes to the decision of repairing or replacing your central air conditioning or heat pump system.

If your current system is over 10 - years of age and you experience a major system failure, such as a compressor failure or and un-repairable refrigerant leak in the coils, you may want to consider replacing or upgrading the entire system. Taking into consideration the high cost of the repairs, parts, age and overall condition of the equipment, replacement is almost always the best option. Today's modern, high efficiency systems can save you hundreds to thousands of dollars a year on operating costs, while providing significantly improved comfort and energy savings. Today's central heat pump and air conditioning system technology is not only a good thing for your wallet, when it comes to energy savings, but these systems are also kind to our environment. With the EPA mandated use of Environmentally Sound Refrigerants required in all new systems in 2010, along with the high Seer Ratings of up to 21 (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio), you can save on energy, while saving the ozone layer for future generations, and still put some green back into your own pockets by cashing in on large rebates, while saving on energy costs for years to come.

At GallettAir Inc., we offer high efficiency environmentally sound central air conditioning and heat pump systems, with seer ratings of up to 21. These systems qualify for large utility and manufacturer rebates. They also qualify for a federal tax credit of $1,500. Rebates and credits can total up to $3,200, which is more of a reason to consider replacing your systems now. You should know that after December 2010 the $1,500 tax credit is no longer available.

If your air conditioning or heat pump systems have to be recharged each season, then you have a refrigerant leak problem that has to be diagnosed and corrected - if possible. There is no better time to contact our office for a pre- season system tune up and evaluation. If you're considering replacing your tired, old system we will provide you with a free, no obligation written estimate and evaluation. We offer affordable, comprehensive parts and labor service agreements for heat pumps and central air conditioning systems that include unlimited service calls and a true 24- hour emergency service. We can even finance your new system, interest free, for 1-year.

Give us a call toll free at 1-800-427-2653 or stop by our Hampton Bays location at 147 W Montauk Highway and receive a free gift. You can visit us on the web, as well, at www.gallettair.com.

Nike Has it Right, "Just Do It" and Make Your Target Weight

By David Lion Rattiner

If you have been trying to lose those pesky 30 pounds that seem to stick to you all winter long thanks to endless holiday eating, you better get cracking.

Summer weather is coming, and if you want to feel energized and healthy while hitting the beach and the restaurants, you're going to need to get down to your target weight.

Fad diets, diet pills and the like may help you lose a few pounds for a few days, but almost always, the weight comes back when you go off of them. By far, the best way to lose weight is a change of mental attitude and acceptance that losing weight is hard and making it happen takes daily determination.

The first thing you have to do is set a target weight. What is your dream weight? Think back to when you felt the most healthy and try to recall how much you weighed back then and make that your goal. Once you have a target weight in mind, that brings you to the next step, which is to buy a scale.

Buying a scale and standing on it every day is important. When you are trying to shed pounds, checking your weight every day reminds you how far away you are from your target weight, and it also is a very easy thing to do for psychological motivation. When you see the number go down, it's very encouraging, and when you see the number go up, you know you need to make changes.

The next thing to focus on is exercise. There is fantasy world and there is the real world. In fantasy world global warming doesn't exist and you can buy diet pills to lose weight. In the real world however, you have to dramatically change your eating and exercise habits to lose weight. There are various ways to motivate yourself to exercise, one way is to remind yourself that your entire life is at stake. People that are overweight live shorter lives, have medical problems that can cost them thousands of dollars and nearly every organ in their body is effected by being overweight. Get yourself scared about it. Matt, a computer tech guy for a refrigerator company in New York City experienced this fear by going to his doctor and asking him, what kinds of things can go wrong if he keeps himself overweight. "Hearing the medical consequences from a doctor was very motivating. I started biking that day," he says.

Running and biking are ideal exercises for weight loss, and if you used to be somebody that did this kind of activity, it shouldn't be that hard for you to get back on it. Exercising is like getting out of bed early in the morning, you just have to do it. For most people, once you are actually moving, completion of the exercise happens. The hardest part is taking action on the decision to get moving, and that decision is all on you. Today is the day, there ain't no way around it so stop thinking that there is.

For some, exercising outside or at the gym is embarrassing because they don't want people to see them struggle. If this is you, get over it. You gain respect from working out. But if you can't get over this, then there is no place more private than your home. Jump rope in your living room, do jumping jacks, do yoga or climb up and down the stairs in your house. All that matters is that you are moving to the point where you really feel a workout, don't buy into "magic" exercises that you can do easily. Working out is hard. Period. Do it.

Finally, you need to focus on diet. I can't tell you how many people I meet who begin a serious exercise routine and then actually gain weight because they justify pigging out since they are working out. Before you know it, they stop working out, and have developed even worse eating habits.

Reducing intake is what needs to be done and reducing carbohydrates is what needs to be done. Say no to a muffin in the morning and say hello to a banana. Say no to pizza at lunch and say hello to a salad. Say no to pasta for dinner and say hello to grilled chicken and vegetables. Dieting is more mental than anything else. Many people who are overweight believe that their body needs simple carbohydrates to survive. It doesn't. In fact, it's what's killing you. Replace all sugary drinks, including juice, with water, seltzer and zero calorie drinks. Eat with a purpose. Obtaining a healthy weight will make you happier than all of the therapy in the world. Make it happen starting now.

TAKE A HIKE By Ken Kindler

Celebrating the Earth

Suffolk County Department of Parks, Recreation and Conservation celebrated its Fourth Annual Earth Day Celebration at Indian Island County Park on April 24. Some of the activities featured were interactive exhibits, nature walks, beach grass planting, live entertainment, marine life exhibits, activities for kids, face painting, and wildlife and kayak demonstrations. This year I led a nature hike and assisted at the table where Suffolk County Parks gave away free indigenous plants to the celebration participants. Even if I'm not assigned to work at this event next year, I will certainly attend, many of my favorite people were there.

Indian Island County Park is a 287-acre park located in Riverhead, at the estuarine mouth of the Peconic River. It is surrounded by water on three sides and faces Flanders Bay, with Terry Creek above it, and Sawmill Creek below it. Estuaries form a transition zone between river environments and ocean environments and are subject to both marine influences, such as tides, waves, and the influx of saline water; and riverine influences, such as flows of fresh water and sediment. The inflow of both seawater and freshwater provide high levels of nutrients in both the water column and sediment, making estuaries among the most productive natural habitats in the world.

What was the "island" at Indian Island County Park is now connected to the mainland by an unpaved causeway. When entering, look for the sign that says "Beach and Picnic Area." One of my favorite walks is on the east side of this road along the white sandy beach that looks out onto Flanders Bay. The road or the beach walk lead to an excellent picnic area with restrooms, tables, grills, benches, and water views.

There is a one-way road that takes you around the perimeter of the park, and out to the "island," so you don't have to walk far to get to any park area. The parking is ample and dispersed. It's impressive how considerate drivers are by keeping to the speed limit, stopping for crossing pedestrians, and passing walkers slowly. This is fortunate, because there are people jogging, pushing strollers, and walking dogs. People who visit this park often realize that you have to connect the 2.5 miles of trail by walking segments of road. When walking the trails, use insect repellent (mosquitoes), take tick precautions, and keep an eye out for poison ivy.

To get to this park, take the Long Island Expressway to exit 71, turn right onto Route 24 at the end of ramp, follow Route 24 south through the Riverhead Traffic Circle, continue on Route 24 and make a left turn (north) at the next traffic light onto Route 105, follow Route 105, cross the Peconic River, pass the golf club on your right, cross Sawmill Creek, then turn into the park entrance to your right.

The entry fee is $8.00 (or $3.00 with a Green Key). Suffolk County residents can purchase Green Key cards for $19.00. Call the Park (631-852-3232) for various discounts applying to veterans, senior citizens and for the non-resident fee. I called that number and found a patient, helpful, and informative person on the other end of the line, and was told that to purchase a resident Green Key card I would need my driver's license and Suffolk County Registration, and that the card provides discounts on activities in various County Parks, and savings on entry fees. There are 100 tent and trailer campsites at Indian Island Park—best to reserve them early. You can get a tent site first come, first serve, or reserve it. If you bring a kayak, ask for a site in Section 8 near a launching site (Camping Reservations 631-244-7275). I learned that there is also an overnight bike hostel, separate from the camping area; an excellent place to rest when taking a long bike tour. I was also reminded that if I wanted to saltwater fish, it might be a good idea to pick up the $10 license at a bait shop before I arrive. In addition, the website, suffolkcountyny.gov, informs potential visitors that there are a number of picnic areas, playgrounds, a volleyball net, restrooms, showers, and a pavilion.

The website also offers maps of the campsites, roads, and hiking trails. While driving the roads, look for the signs that say "Hiking Trails—No Vehicles." The trails north of Creek Road give nice views of Terry Creek. From there you can cut across Indian Point Road, pass the kayak launching site, and walk along the beach up to the "island."

This is an excellent place to bring your family to enjoy nature, without really having to rough it.

Raving Beauty By Janet Flora

Sample the Makeup Professionals Can't Live Without

Makeup artists' brands of makeup like MAC, Bobbie Brown and Stila, to name a few, have long gone mainstream. But if you want to experiment with products that professional makeup artists can't live without, you must visit Alcone, either at the New York City location at 22 West 49th Street (between 8th and 9th Ave.) 212-757-3734, or their warehouse in Long Island City, at 5-45 49th Avenue (718-361-8373). Alvin Cohen started Alcone in 1950 selling false eyelashes and makeup out of his father's pharmacy. The Mallardi family purchased Alcone in 1983, and expanded it by adding theatrical brands of makeup, new products and tools, making it one of the leading "go-to" companies for pros.

There are many products you've never heard of, and may never need, like blood gel, foam latex and wig making supplies. Other products are must-haves. Consider Alcone's own brand of non-latex sponges. InStyle Magazine rated them "Best Makeup Sponge" four years in a row. They don't fall apart, they're washable and give you the smoothest application. If you do use foundation, and/or concealer, the only way to get a smooth application is by using a sponge. A few makeup artists insist that fingers are best because the warmth helps to blend the product. Don't believe it; you'll get streaks and wasted product. Most pros use sponges.

Alcone's makeup remover cloths contain a mild

makeup remover that wipes away all makeup, including mascara. You won't even need water. If you have a bruise, blemish or tattoo you want to hide for an occasion, get Krylon's Derma Color Camouflage Cream. It's packaged in a 1-oz container, or a mini palette. Often when covering discolorations or a tattoo you need several colors. Each mini palette contains 16 shades, in five color combos.

There are products you may not have considered, like Face To Face Matte Antishine, which is used to control shine on oily skin in a way that powder can't. It's great if you want to look less oily throughout the day. It is available in three shades, packaged in 18 ml tube for $28.00. Collyre Bleu Eye Drops, made in France, was created to remove the yellow in the whites of the eyes. It will make the whites of the eyes appear whiter and brighter. You'll find fun palettes of concealers, lip colors, as well as pencils, liners, powders, brushes and professional brush cleaners and things you won't see at any makeup counter at the Alcone Wall. Before the retail store moved to the W. 49th St. location, it was on West 19th St. in Chelsea. When that store opened, the now-famous makeup artist Scott Andrew (who has done the makeup for hundreds of fashion magazine covers) managed that store. He started the practice of having every famous (and not-so-famous) person who came in sign the wall. Vince Mallardi owner of Alcone always joked that if they moved they'd have to take the wall with them. Well they did move and they took the wall, it is in pieces at the warehouse. A new wall is in progress at 49th Street. Go to either location to see the wall and try the products. Or go to Alcone.com and have yourself a professional—if virtual experience.

rienced, attractive and friendly bartenders. The uniforms range from khaki and white for that clambake on the beach or backyard to black tie dress for the more formal event.

Until next week. Ciao and happy spring shopping!

If you have any questions or your shop is having sales, new inventory or re-opening for the upcoming season, my readers want to hear about it. E-mail me at: I will be happy to get the word out.

Err, A parent By Susan Galardi

When I look back on some of the events we took our son to when he was just 3 or 4, sometimes I think I was nuts. You know, when they have those age suggestions attached to performances, maybe parents should consider them, I rethought.

Then I quickly changed my mind, going back to my own adage: "If he doesn't remember it in his mind, he'll remember it in his heart and soul." Exposing children to culture – museums, theatre, music – has to be a good thing (unless it really annoys people in the audience – a bit of etiquette some parents forget).

There are several fine performances coming up at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center (WHBPAC) that most kids would enjoy. And because PAC shows are of such a high quality, it's nice for parents too. On weekdays, they present shows mostly attended by busloads of school kids. But you can buy individual tickets. I say take the kid out of school if his school doesn't participate, or urge the administration to consider a field trip to PAC.

On Tuesday, May 18, at 10:00 and 12:30 p.m., the Hudson Vagabond Puppets, known for larger-than-life puppetry and masks, present their fluttering production of Butterfly: The Story of a Life Cycle, for ages 3-10.

This microscopic look at the insect world examines the life cycle of the monarch butterfly, following the metamorphosis from egg to caterpillar to adult butterfly. Each stage of the journey is brought to life by giant puppets, song and dance. I've seen this group and they're amazing. Visually stunning productions.

Two days later, on Thursday, May 20 at 10 a.m. & 12:30 p.m., is a show for the older set, ages 9-13. It's Roseneath Theatre's production of The Incredible Speediness of Jamie Cavanaugh. Jamie is a girl who always seems to be moving too fast, her attention flying and landing everywhere except where it should be. After she decides that her ADHD is actually a "super power," she ends up creating trouble for herself and her best friend Max. This play is an insightful look at the impact of ADHD on a child's life, told with gentle humor and passionate honesty. The show is sure to promote discussion on issues, including bullying and learning styles.

Tickets to either show (of Jamie Cavanaugh and Butterfly) are just $10. Call 631-288-2350, ext 102 or Email: cherylw@whbpac.org for more info.

Finally, in an all-out blow out, Grammy-award winners Dan Zanes and Friends (a Noggin staple) are scheduled for Saturday, May 22, at 3 p.m. Dubbed "The Crown Prince of contemporary kids music" by People Magazine, Zanes, the former lead singer and songwriter for the rock band The Del Fuegos, performs exuberant, handmade music filled with irresistible grooves drawn from many musical traditions. Zanes and his band create a "Woodstock for Kids," with

Great Shows for Kids

Dan Zanes and Friends, Jamie Cavanaugh at WPAC

American traditional songs, dance classics and smart, inventive originals. Having enjoyed his lunacy and fine, unusual musicianship and arrangements as interstitials on Noggin, I would think it would be a great live show. Although PAC doesn't specify, I'd say preschool to 3rd graders for this show.

Tickets to Dan Zanes are $50, $35, $20. There's a special Pre-Show Dance Party for an additional $5, from 2-2:45 p.m. in Studio B. (The Dance Party is limited to 20 participants. Due to space limitations only one adult may accompany each child.) Contact the Box Office to reserve your spot for the dance party, and purchase tickets for the show: whbpac.org, 631-288-1500, or visit the box office at 76 Main Street, Westhampton Beach.

Simple Art of Cooking Silvia Lehrer

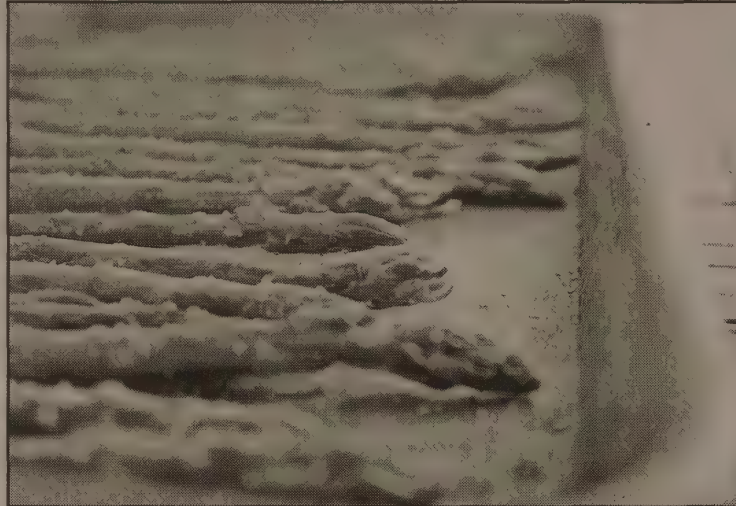

Simple Spring Supper

A meal can be made remarkable for its simplicity and making a meal for guests does not have to be tiresome or intimidating. I recall many a fine meal prepared for us by friends. The dishes were tasty and beautifully presented with a certain freedom to the meal in that everything could be prepared ahead. Like all fine meals it followed certain principles of menu planning. One need not be obsessed with a particular dish—simply a coherent theme with a balance of flavors, colors and textures.

A good menu always takes the seasons into account. We are in high spring with farm stands all about us offering the most superior ingredients of the season.

The light, neutral taste of salmon is a perfect foil for a variety of dressings. A do-ahead kettle cooked potato chip mixture blanket individual salmon filets to bake later. Local fresh asparagus are trimmed, arranged in their baking/serving dish, and ready to roast with a coating of your best extra virgin olive oil and coarse salt. A country salad with goat cheese and walnuts in lemony walnut vinaigrette makes a great beginning to your meal.

Put out a bowl of plump, sweet strawberries—best tasting in late spring—serve with yogurt and a drizzle of local honey for that must-have sweet ending.

HIGH HEAT ROAST ASPARAGUS

Al Forno, a restaurant in Rhode Island, made this recipe famous back in the 90s. It's just about my favorite way to cook and eat asparagus.

Serves 4

1 pound local asparagus
3 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper

Preheat oven to 450°F.

1. Break spears where they naturally bend and discard hard ends. Trim off the points along the spears with a paring knife, then rinse and dry spears with paper towels.

2. Pour oil on a cookie sheet, season with a good bit of salt and freshly ground pepper to your taste. Roll the asparagus around in the seasoned oil to coat, then spread to one layer deep. Place in oven and roast for 8 to 10 minutes. Serve hot.

COUNTRY SALAD WITH GOAT CHEESE, WALNUTS AND BACON

This satisfying salad blends pungent greens, fresh croutons, a crumble of goat cheese and nuggets of crisp bacon in a lemon walnut vinaigrette.

Serves 4-6

1 head chicory
1 head red leaf lettuce
1 cup croutons, preferably homemade*
1/2 pound bacon
1 log (5 1/2 ounce) goat cheese

Vinaigrette

2 shallots, finely chopped
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Coarse (kosher) salt
Freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
3 tablespoons walnut oil
1/2 cup toasted walnut pieces for garnish (optional)

1. Remove any bruised outer leaves from greens. Wash and spin dry separately and roll in paper towels to absorb excess moisture. Set aside or place in a plastic bag and refrigerate overnight.

2. Prepare croutons* and cook bacon (microwave or skillet) until crisp. Drain on paper towels and set aside.

3. In a mixing bowl, combine chopped shallots, lemon juice and seasonings and stir to mix. Slowly whisk in oils until thoroughly incorporated. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary.

4. When ready to serve, combine greens, croutons and bacon in a salad bowl. Pour on salad dressing and toss very well to coat. Crumble the goat cheese over the greens and sprinkle with toasted walnuts if using.

*Making your own croutons is a good way to use up day-old bread. Cut bread into 1/2 inch thick squares. Place cubes on a baking sheet and toss to coat in a little olive oil. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven, about 8-10 minutes until brown and crisp. Make extra—they store well in a tightly covered tin in a cool, dark cupboard.

SALMON WITH POTATO CHIP CRUST

It's spring and wild salmon is available at your local fish markets. Prepare a coating with the North Fork Potato Chip Company local artisanal Kettle-cooked Potato Chips to give texture and taste to this springtime treat.

Serve 4 to 6

4 to 6 Salmon fillets, about 6 ounces each
1 to 1 1/2 cups coarsely crushed Kettle-cooked potato chips

1/2 to 3/4 cup coarse unseasoned bread crumbs
Zest from 1 lime
Kosher salt and pepper to taste
1/4 to 1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil

1. Arrange salmon fillets on a baking sheet lined with parchment. Crush the potato chips in a mixing bowl and mix with the bread crumbs. Add the lime zest, salt and pepper to taste and enough olive oil to bind. Place fillets on a lightly oiled baking sheet. Divide mixture evenly and coat the top of each fillet with the mixture.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

2. Bake fillets about 8 to 10 minutes for medium rare and serve with roast asparagus. I prefer to cook my salmon to faintly pink within.

Rare Rock Footage at Legends Series

Artists featured in "The Legends Series": Janis Joplin, The Jackson Five, The Rolling Stones, Sly and the Family Stone

By Stacy Dermont

Bay Street Theatre's Picture Show expands this Spring with a new series for music lovers. The Legends Series, sponsored in part by Long Island Radio Broadcasting WEHM 92.9/96.9, will feature four evenings of incredibly rare film footage of live performances by some of the greatest musical icons of all time.

The Legends Series is an exciting work-in-progress, compiled and hosted by Sag Harbor's own documentarian and archivist Joe Lauro, founder of Historic Films Archive. Lauro will bring to the big screen amazing musical performance video clips culled from one of the world's largest archives of music on film, from the period 1920 to 1995. Based in Greenport, Historic Films is dedicated to the re-discovery and preservation of all forms of American entertainment as it exists on film and videotape.

Lauro will not name names, but in addition to the famous faces on the big screen, some noteworthy players may make appearances at the screenings.

Lauro said that it's not rarity alone that makes the footage to be shown at Bay Street special, "This series offers the best performers at the height of their abilities. When you SEE the music as it is being played, it's a whole different experience. We go back to the original masters for ass-kicking sound. This is the closest thing to experiencing these legends live. Most of them are now dead or not performing anymore. Unlike viewing them on a

Pulp, Paper, Paint at Delaney Cooke Gallery

Beth Giles has long been known as a noteworthy printmaker and former director of Southampton College's Avram Gallery. With her present show at the Delaney Cooke Gallery in Sag Harbor, Giles goes beyond what we have come to expect. Still using the printmaking medium to advantage, the artist continues her experiments with handmade paper, this time incorporating her own portrait and abstract images. What's unique with this series, however, are the myriad purposes and themes that the work suggests.

Yet we might not even think about the themes, so exquisite is the formal quality of the pieces: the paper and how it's torn in a seemingly spontaneous way; the graceful pink red and green colors; the circular shapes conveying a subtle sense of sensuality; the fragility of the compositions.

We are drawn to ask about how the paper is made. According to Giles, various fibers, such as cotton, abaca, linen and flax, are used for the basic material. The fiber is then hydrated and blended together in a container to make the pulp. Giles next uses a screen to lift out the pulp, putting it on a flat surface to dry.

When looking at the work that's created, there's a strong evocation of thematic strength and endurance, despite the paper's physical fragility and its lovely texture. This contradiction is intriguing, especially when we consider that the pieces' circular shapes suggest a "book" as we flip through the various pages. What can be more enduring than a book, we wonder?

Work by Beth Giles

Moreover, if we consider that the "book" is an autobiographical one, this allows the work to be perceived as even stronger. After all, what's more lasting than a life story? There's much to infer that the images are autobiographical if we let our imagination run a little wild. First, prints of the artist's face are interspersed throughout the pages; some are noticeable while a few peek out from a sheet of paper. This "hide-and-seek" process, where images are both shown and revealed, somewhat mirrors the method that authors use when writing their true stories.

There are other images in this book, like work resembling landscapes. Some notations are just abstract splotches of color. Could these possibly arbitrary images represent a "stream of consciousness" which the artist adds to her visual autobiography?

Of course, other interpretations pop up. For example, most circular configurations recall the rhythm of life and death, a basic tenet applied to various religious and philosophical disciplines. From the general to the specific: the female sex organ also comes to mind when looking at this same shape.

Sources for themes come to the surface the more we study Giles' work, including influences from Japanese art. We can even see images that look like the moon and the earth. The various designs made by the tearing of the paper are other salient aspects of the work, and meanings can be derived from these as well.

"Pulp, Paper, Print" will be on view at Delaney Cooke Gallery, 150 Main Street, Sag Harbor, until May 31. The opening is Saturday, May 22, 5-7pm. Call 917-445-8427.

tiny computer screen, this is not a casual experience. Each clip is a time capsule of the performer and of the era."

Featured clips will include some local favorites—scenes from the late '60s of Southampton's fabled nite club, The Barge, and Billy Joel when he was a member of the Long Island band, the Hassles. (Look for a guy with a Beatles hair cut.)

Lauro is passionate about music and film. Inspired by an early love of The Beatles, he began playing the bass at age 11. After many years with The Lone Sharks, he now plays with his own band, The Who Dat Loungers.

While a film student at New York University, Lauro worked on one of the first projects to bring classic rock performance to video and cable television audiences, The Compleat Beatles. The rest, as they say, is history. Lauro's company now holds the rights to an enormous library of works including "The Ed Sullivan Show" and "Don Kirshner's Rock Concert." This archive supplies footage to most music documentaries made today.

The Legends Series will kick off next Saturday, May 22 at 8p.m. with a "Legends of Rock" evening. Audiences will see and hear rock icons such as Janis Joplin, The Beatles, James Brown, the Rolling Stones, Led Zeppelin, Grateful Dead, The Ramones, Chuck Berry, Jefferson Airplane, the Jackson Five, Sly & the Family Stone and many others in footage rarely seen before. Following the film is a special live performance by local band, The Who Dat Loungers. So...dance!

The series continues on Monday, June 7 with the "Legends of Jazz and Blues." Filmed performances by Billie Holiday, Louis Armstrong, Benny Goodman, Muddy Waters, Ella Fitzgerald, Jimmy Reed, Bessie Smith, Lester Young, Nat King Cole and other Jazz and Blues legends will be featured. The truly legendary guitarist and singer, Howlin' Wolf, who would have been 100 years old on June 10, will also be featured.

Monday, June 14 at 8p.m. is "The Fabulous Divas" evening featuring rare and exciting footage of Aretha Franklin, Etta James, Barbra Streisand, Eartha Kitt, Janis Joplin, Madonna, Julie Andrews, Ethel Merman, Peggy Lee, The Supremes and many surprises.

The Legends Series will conclude on Monday, June 21 at 8 p.m. with "The Pioneers of Rock." Footage of early heroes of rock before 'rock' even existed will be shown including—Elvis Presley, Fats Domino, Little Richard, Bo Diddley, Louis Prima, Louis Jordan, Ruth Brown and many others.

Historic Films has provided film clips to everyone from The Rock & Roll Hall of Fame Museum and Martin Scorsese (Blues and Bob Dylan projects) to "American Idol" and The Grammy Awards.

Lauro says, because he's a performer himself, he's looking for a full house of enthusiastic fans to attend these screenings. Early ticket sales suggest that he'll have just that. Rock on!

The Legends Series at Bay Street Theatre, tickets for each evening $15. To purchase tickets go to baystreet.org or call the Bay Street Box Office at 631-725-9500. Or visit Bay Street on the Long Wharf, Sag Harbor. The box office is now open Tues-Sat, 11am-6pm.

Johnny Swim

Abner Ramirez and Amanda Ramirez

Following their much-heralded New York debut at S.O.B.'s in Manhattan, Los Angeles-based acoustic duo JohnnySwim will make a special Hamptons appearance at Wolfer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack tonight. Abner Ramirez (guitar and vocals) and Amanda Sudano Ramirez (vocals) were asked to conclude Wolfer's popular acoustic series. For this intimate East End performance JohnnySwim will share songs from their two EP's, 1-4 (2008) and the forthcoming 5-8 (2010).

Ramirez and Ramirez formed JohnnySwim while working in Nashville. Each had pursued a solo career, together they groove on melodies infused with a contagious mix of soul, sass, and spirit. A move to Los Angeles has further fueled their unique songwriting. For the record, they are neither married, engaged, or related—but they do make beautiful music together.

As always, wine is sold by the glass, along with complimentary cheeses. Stop by and relax with friends or make new friends and enjoy the vineyard view from the Tuscan-style tasting room. No reservations are necessary, there is no cover charge.

Concluding 2010 Candlelight Friday features JohnnySwim at Wolfer Estate Vineyard, 5-8p.m., 139 Sagg Road, Sagaponack. 631-537-5106 ext.25, wolfer.com

Royal Pains
Casting Audition

The USA television series "Royal Pains" returns to the Hamptons this month! After a successful freshman year, the series will return to shoot several scenes in the area. They are looking to cast a Hamptons estate party with real, upscale Hamptonites to create the genuine high society vibe and real golfers to appear in an exclusive golf course scene.

Also filming in the Hamptons is the new feature film called Something Borrowed, based on the best-selling novel. The film, starring Ginnifer Goodwin of "Big Love" and Kate Hudson, will shoot in May and June.

Both productions have contracted Grant Wilfley Casting to coordinate and cast all background performers. "We welcome the local, well-heeled community to get involved as background players," said Grant Wilfley, Hampton resident and president of Grant Wilfley Casting, Inc. Both projects are seeking locals to play wealthy vacationers, upscale Hamptonites, young and attractive bar patrons, boaters (those who are comfortable on the water) and beach-goers. Anyone interested should email a recent picture, stats (height and weight), and contact information to hamptons@gwcnyc.com. Please put "Hamptons LOCAL" in the subject line. Please include your union status (SAG/AFTRA/Non-Union), the role for which you are submitting, and if you own a luxury vehicle (please note: year, make, model & color) in the body of your email.

Burt Glinn, Karine Laval, Christine Matthai, Susan Pear Meisel, Blair Seagram. 66 Main St., Sag Harbor. Thurs.-Mon. 12:30-7 p.m. 631-725-3100. Tullaboothgallery.com.

VERED GALLERY - 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily. 68 Park Pl., East Hampton. 631-324-3303.

North Fork

Noah's, The New Hot Restaurant In Greenport

By Henry J. Salmaggi

Noah's has quickly become the newest hot spot on the North Fork, and there are plenty of reasons why. Award winning chef Noah Schwartz and his wife Sunita have come up with a seemingly simple recipe for success. They are blending tantalizing tapas, with fresh, unique entrees, complemented by a delicious drink menu and a well structured wine list starring some local gems. This lively upbeat nightlife atmosphere would otherwise be missing in Greenport.

Everyone knows size matters, and in this case, smaller is better. Chef Noah's emphasis is on the tapas small style plates and "taste" dishes priced from $6 to $12 each. "I didn't think the North Fork was fully ready for a busy tapas style place like the west coast is, but we're doing great," said Noah.

We started our meal with Beau Soleil Oysters from Canada, off the raw bar portion of the menu. They were the perfect size and were like silk to swallow. They are a perfect complement to many of the wines Noah's drink menu has to offer. Noah's has the most extensive Oyster menu I've seen on the North Fork with three different varieties including Blue Point and Pipe's Cove Oysters.

Then we noshed on a Jumbo Lump Crab Cake with celery fennel slaw. This delightful dish was refreshing, light, and is not to be skipped. Moroccan Spice Lamb Meatballs were next, served in a Pomegranate glaze, with house made Hummus, and Harissa. These unique, and melt in your mouth meatballs have a sweet and spicy flavor. That was exemplified by the Castello Di Borghese Cabernet Franc I was sipping on.

Before we get to the main course, we need to touch on Noah's ambiance. The place itself is very warm and inviting, as symbolized by the fire ball burning next to the hostess stand when you walk in off of Front Street.

Noah shed the South Beachy feel of the space. There is a more industrial, Manhattan feel, and a chiller vibe. There is a decent size bar which has already become a favorite for locals looking for tasty cocktails. All the stools filled up fast in the early evening, as did the tables. That's very surprising for a Monday night in the off season in Greenport. "The locals have been very good to us... the same faces come in everyday, sometimes even a few times a day, we're doing great," Sunita told me.

If you were ever in the Frisky Oyster Bar, you won't be disappointed to see the walls have been transformed from the busy paint splattered paper, to a relaxing light-green color. They're decorated with classy, eye-catching framed fish artwork. The hardwood floors and high ceiling give the place fantastic acoustics and really bring it alive. And on a nice summer night you can dine street side, while strolling through the the Carousel in Mitchell Park, right out into Greenport Harbor.

Now, Noah's is not just light bites, it's a place for those of us with healthy appetites as well. And for people who are not into sharing food, there are larger entrée plates ranging from $15 to $26. We went with the full plate. Crescent Farm Duck Confit. That's served with fingerling potato, wild mushroom, and frisee salad. You can taste the freshness of all of the ingredients in the dishes. Nothing is overpowering. Everything blended together perfectly. Now here are the two dishes I enjoyed the most. The Grilled Sardines off the Small Plates menu. That was served with Piquillo Peppers, lemon aioli, and basil. This is a magnificent looking dish, and it tastes even better. "We don't have a signature dish, we like to change everything up, but it seems like the Sardines are becoming a staple", Noah told me. The other, as crazy as this sounds, was the small plate of Sep's Farm roasted Asparagus. They were roasted to perfection and topped with shaved parmesan, and Truffle vinaigrette. These two are a must order. For the finale, we went with the S'Mores Pot de Crème. Yes, it is toasted marshmallow served in a chocolate cream with graham crackers. "I've actually seen people lick the bowl, go ahead, I'll come back for it," our waiter Dan Ramos said. And, I'm pretty sure he wasn't kidding. The staff was well educated in the menu, as well as wines. They are very personable, and very attentive to the tables. Here's a little about Chef Noah. He was the chef at the Seafood Barge at the Port of Egypt Marina until they closed for good this winter. The 31 year old Malverne native came home to Long Island after spending more than half a decade cooking at several different style places in California's wine country. "When I came back a few years ago, and started cooking at Seafood Barge I realized this was the place, the North Fork is ready...people started to know me and my food." Noah told me as he made the rounds from table to table. "I've always said it's the perfect place (The North Fork) with the fresh agriculture and the rich aquaculture, and the wines." Despite the diner rush, Noah and Sunita canvassed the crowd, shooting the breeze and making sure everyone was alright. We only heard positive feedback. Many of the local restaurants are reporting booming spring business. Noah's which has only been open since February, is one of them, and is enjoying impressive early success. This joint will surely be a smash hit once the summer crowds pour into town. "The best thing is seeing people leaving with a belly full of food and a big smile on their faces" Sunita said. And I'm sure there is a lot of that in Noah's near future.

FRIENDS TILL THE END...

Dear Dan,

Regarding your Facebook friend requests, I notice you have been trying to "friend" a lot of people here in Patchogue on Facebook. However, there are two things that need to be cleared up before we can be Friends.

First, you wrote a mean and factually inaccurate editorial about the people of Patchogue last year after Marcelo Lucero was murdered in our village by a young man from Medford. You said some pretty mean things about us Dan and ignored all the good things that are happening in this vibrant and diverse community. I have lived here almost 19 years, raised four children and started a business here five years ago, so I know a thing or two about our village. Patchogue is a middle class town that certainly does not the kind of money or a "brand name" that other east end communities have. However, in a "down" economy our main street is bustling, construction and development are happening all over town and there is a music and arts scene here that is just exploding right now. Young people and families are moving here because it's an affordable pace to live. We have two colleges, Suffolk County's largest performing arts center, two ferries to Fire Island, lots of restaurants, a half dozen live music venues, two art galleries, easy access to mass transit and Sunrise Highway, and a lot more on the way as projects like New Village and Art Space are currently under construction. And it's all within walking distance!

Dozens of volunteers and a forward thinking village government have all worked together to create some real magic in recent years. So I think you owe us an apology for the hateful and hurtful words you wrote, and maybe you owe it to your readers outside of Patchogue to report more about the really good things that are happening here.

Second, those of us who do volunteer work here have often sent press releases to you about events, especially arts events that your readers might be interested in. Several times your editorial department has told us that Patchogue is "outside our readership area." Yet stacks of your papers are all over town and your advertising people are here trying to sell ads. It seems you want people here to read Dan's Papers and you want our ad dollars but you won't cover events in our village. I know from my work on the board of the Patchogue Theatre that people from "out east" do come into Patchogue for entertainment and restaurants here in town so we really are a part of your readership area. I have had one prominent member of the arts communities in the Hamptons tell me that she considers Patchogue part of the east end. Have you changed your editorial policy? Are you planning to cover Patchogue now?

I hope you understand how deep these feelings are about these two issues. Just say Dan's Papers to some of us and we get a knot in our stomach. All of that being said, I have always enjoyed reading Dan's Papers so it really hurts that this has come between us. I think it's time for you to make amends and I for one would like to see that happen. Come on and visit us. I'd love to give you a tour of the amazing things that are happening here and introduce you to some of the people who are making it happen. There are dozens of great events coming this summer so this is a good time to cover our village. I think Dan's Papers and Patchogue would be a good fit together and we could be good friends. It's up to you Dan.

Respectfully,
Christopher Capobianco

I love Patchogue and I'm sorry I was mean. -DR
FOR THE RECORD

Dear Dan,

As part time resident of Quogue, I read with interest your article on George Motz dated May 7, as well as the one in the Southampton Press, May 6. There is, however, a major difference between the two articles.

In your article, you state that Motz cherry picked his companies trades and assigned the profitable ones to his personal account. It would indicate that he was lining his own pocket and that of his wife, Kittric, who happens to be the village judge.

In the Southampton Press article, they unequivocally state that Mr. Motz did not "pocket the money," but assigned it to the companies proprietary account.

This is a significant and material difference of the same story. I would appreciate a clarification and I believe that your readers would like to see a response in your next edition as well.

On another point, you state that Mr. Motz appointed his wife as judge. Although I do not know, but it would seem unlikely he could do this.

For the record, I've never met or spoken to Mr. or Mrs. Motz. I look forward to your clarification.

Peter D Jones

THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES...

Dear Dan,

Just when you thought it was safe we have a sicko bringing a bomb into Times Square? Then we have the oil spill that will kill the gulf fishing industry for two decades, and now a sex offender trailer in the Hamptons. What will happen next?

Well I made it. I am now the bionic man. I had a pacemaker installed and I'm good for another thousand miles. Life is not easy for sure. I had never been in a hospital so this was a new experience for me. No wonder people can't get better, you can't sleep in a hospital. When you get to sleep there's always someone coming in to take your tempter and check your pulse? I told a nurse, if you come in one more time I wouldn't have a pulse. Now get the hell out. I wasn't a happy camper for sure. My heart rate was 29, so I had no choice, do it or die.

When I got home I needed to replace my main air conditioner, have my tile cleaned, and my yard re-landscaped because of the storm. Other than that, life is just a bowl of cherries!

I see a sex offender trailer upsets the East Hampton broom butts? Oh what a big problem, just hire someone to watch it. It will give a job to some one out of work and just think maybe these guys will get some rest and maybe get a job.

The rich and famous are so busy getting rich and famous that they forget that there's another side of life. Marther found out some of the best people are in jail. They got caught -maybe you or I haven't been caught yet? Something to think about?

As I get rested I am feeling better. I think back at all the energy I had at Dan's Papers. All the people I met and helped, and all the ads I brought in. We were cranking then.

Life is like the earth always turning, changing. I look at the airline industry, United and Continental are merging. I feel bad that the Continental name will go by the wayside.

I remember when the flight attendants were beautiful and they had to speak two languages. Some were nurses. I mean real RN's. Today, they are lucky if they can find a guy under 200 lbs. under 50, with a high school diploma. It is a crazy life, but the ride was fun and I got to meet many great people at Dan's Papers. You are one of them for sure. Be well.

Police Blotter

Laptop Stolen

Somebody stole an $800 MacBook laptop from a woman in East Hampton. The woman believes that the laptop computer was stolen while she was sleeping. $800 MacBook? Was this the version that was sold in 1989? Because last time I checked a MacBook costs people 2 to 3 grand, and it does so many amazing things! You can check your e-mail with it!

Madoff Wannabe

George Motz, the former Quogue Village Mayor, was sentenced to 8 years in prison for securities fraud after pleading guilty.

Shocking

A man in Montauk zapped himself while trying to repair his lawn mower. The electric shock the man received was powerful enough to floor him to the ground. He was able to quickly recover, did not need to call the police, and then called a landscaping company to help him out.

Shoe Stuck In The Gas

A woman in Eastport was arrested for DWI after he shoe got stuck in the gas peddle of her car and she hit her husband with the car. The woman was leaving a parking spot outside of a restaurant when the incident occurred. Dang Jimmy Choo's.

Heroin? Really?

There have been reports all over Long Island about a growing problem of teens and heroin. So far the blotter has been empty with teenagers and heroin until last week, when police arrested an 18 year-old man who has had previous narcotics violations. The man was found to be in possession of three capped hypodermic needles on his person.

Shelter Island

A rabid raccoon was sent to heaven by a Shelter Island resident thanks to a trusty 12 gauge shotgun.

Shelter Island 2

Reports of unusual drops of blood pressure have been reported on Shelter Island. Apparently many have reported that literally the second they get off the ferry and onto Shelter Island, their blood pressure strangely goes down dramatically. An investigation is underway.

It Was Like A Football

The writer of this police blotter has a rabbit this week in his car while driving to Montauk. This is the second time that this has happened on "the stretch." The rabbit went flying into the air, kind of like a punted football. We said some prayers, it was very sad, poor little guy.

TWO MOVES AHEAD OF THE OTHER GUYS.

Some of our competitors never get it. They brush aside the notion that a "move" is as emotional for you as it is physical for them. The professionals who arrive at your home from Despatch of Southampton Moving & Storage, view their job differently.

At Despatch, we understand that this is a "people" business, and our first responsibility is to our clients. We monitor our work consistently, and make certain that our equipment and trucks are in first-rate condition. We're in constant communication with our clients — to learn of any changes or special needs.

Not everybody takes this kind of time for their clients. We're there to make your moving day less stressful. We not only feel that our devotion to service is important, but necessary.

After all, it's your move.
